ALERT DECLARED IN PORTUGAL

LISBON, Portugal (UPI) — The government declared a nationwide military alert today and began issuing ammunition, grenades and combat food rations to loyal troops in Oporto in face of a right-wing bomb campaign and rumors of an impending coup by the far left.

The nation also was hit by a wave of bombing directed chiefly against left-wing naval officers. By late afternoon there had been nine bomb explosions and key military commanders were summoned to Lisbon to discuss the series of crises.

"The situation here is very tense," one officer reported from Oporto where the government sent armored cars to strategic points of the city and to an army barracks where rebellious soldiers called an anti-government demonstration in defiance of military leaders.

The security precautions in Oporto were taken after the region's military commander, Brig. Antonio Pires Veloso, said he would halt any attempt by the rebellious soldiers to gather at a key artillery base on the outskirts of the city.

Leftists reacted to Veloso's decision by calling their militants for a protest demonstration. The far left urged their militants to leave their jobs and go to the artillery base where the rebel soldiers were holding their meeting.

"Portugal will be very lucky if it survives this weekend without serious trouble," one politician said.

On Thursday night, only 15,000 leftists turned out in answer to Communist calls for a demonstration that some observers expected would be the prelude to an attempt to overthrow the moderate-leftist government.

TUBE STORMED

MONTREAL (CP(— More than 12,000 people marched on city hall while hundreds of others stormed downtown subway stations Thursday to protest recent transit fare increases.

Police spokesmen said the protest was peaceful although a few of the demonstrators, mostly university and junior college students, broke windows at city hall and at one subway station.

Hundreds of students at the station also leaped over turnstiles.

EXHAUSTION FELLS MACKASEY

Postal Workers Seek Return to Bargaining

Times News Services

Negotiators for inside postal workers delivered notice to Postmaster-General Bryce Mackasey in Ottawa late Thursday asking for a resumption of contract negotiations in an attempt to end their strike, now in its fourth day.

Mackasey, meanwhile, collapsed in his office from exhaustion this afternoon.

Jean-Claude Parrot, chief negotiator for the Canadian Union of Postal Workers, said talks could resume when Mackasey lifted an ultimatum that the union accept the government's wage offer before other issues are discussed.

The letter, delivered Thursday night by private courier to the minister's office, says the union bargaining team is prepared to return to negotiations within two hours of a call by Mackasey.

Before his collapse, Mackasey told the Commons that he will reply later today.

The government "will be ready to put a package together to put before union negotiators after we have had a chance to analyze the letter," he said.

Mackasey added in the House that some of the 22,000 workers have asked for permission to return to work and the post office has granted that permission.

Inside postal workers represented by some New Brunswick and Newfoundland locals are among those willing to work, he added.

As the postmaster-general spoke in the House, about 50 demonstrators marched before the Parliament Buildings urging an end to the strike.

An official of CUPW, taking pictures of the demonstrators, said most appeared to be union members who work part-time.

The official, shop steward Gus Meinert of the 1,200-member Ottawa local, sad he was "taking pictures of our members that we want to talk to afterwards" but they were perfectly free to demonstrate as they wished.

Mackasey paid a brief visit to the marchers before entering the Commons and one marcher asked him: "When are you going to investigate that union?"

Mackasey replied: "It is more important that you people clean out your own leadership . . ."

The marcher asked "what about those goon squads?" He referred apparently to reports of violence in Vancouver and Montreal.

"They are the biggest cowards in the world," said Mackasey.

"They always are — if you people stand up to them, they'll run away."

In Vancouver, Gerald Boyko and Brian Nelson, members of the union, were charged with common assault Thursday after two post office employees said they were prevented from crossing a picket line.

Second Turk Envoy Shot

PARIS (UPI)—Turkish ambassador Ismail Erez and his chauffeur were killed today in the heart of Paris when unknown terrorists machinegunned the envoy's car, police said.

Erez was the second Turkish ambassador murdered within a week. Three gunmen invaded the Turkish embassy in Vienna Wednesday, shot the ambassador to death and fled.

No motive for the slaying of ambassador Danis Tunaligil in Vienna was ever established, but authorities said the slaying was carried out by three swarthy men they described as southern Europeans.

There was some speculation the Turks were slain as result of the Turko-Greek crisis over Cyprus, but police could not confirm this other than saying the killings could have been politically inspired.

Police said two or three men opened fire on the limousine carrying Ambassador Erez on Quai John F. Kennedy, near the Bir Hakeim bridge over the Seine river.

Witnesses said two or three men stepped down from the sidewalk into the slow-moving heavy traffic along the Seine embankment when the Turkish embassy limousine approached.

Police said the men whipped submachine guns from under their coats and opened fire. Submachine guns also were used in the Vienna slaying.

In Ankara, an emergency meeting of the Turkish cabinet was called after news of the Paris slaying was received.

OIL-SOAKED DUCK, a victim of the sudden spill of about 52,000 gallons of oil from an Imperial Oil refinery into the Red River at Winnipeg, is held by 11-year-old Pam Gray. Officials said today they believe emergency measures were successful in containing the oil.

Ten-Mile Point Marine Reserve

The first marine ecological reserves in B.C. have been established in local waters.

Twenty-seven acres of sea bed at the end of Ten-Mile Point and one square nautical mile on the floor of Satellite Channel have been formed into reserves by the provincial government.

Resource Minister Bob Williams said both the channel reserve lying between Salt Spring Island and North Saanich and the Ten-Mile Point reserve are exceptionally rich in marine life and have a long history of use by scientists at the University of Victoria.

"By setting aside these marine ecological reserves, we do not intend to interfere with navigation or sports fishing," said Williams.

Williams said he hopes the new reserves will encourage UVic to continue its research programs and he asked the public to avoid disturbing those areas and to report any damage noticed.

The government also extended the Baeria Islets ecological reserve in Barclay Sound to include marine contours up to a 20-fathom contour.

The area is particularly rich in west coast marine life, said Williams.

Iceland Women Strike

REYKJAVIK (Reuter) — THE WOMEN OF Iceland went on strike today, leaving their menfolk wondering how to run the country without them.

Housewives, women teachers, clerks, industrial workers and even nursemaids all over the island said they were taking the day off, bringing tiny Iceland almost to a standstill.

The militant women — there are about 60,000 of them over the age of 19, said latest census figures — staged their token stoppage to prove just how indispensable they are.

And the men, who treated all the strike threats as a huge joke, began to get the point.

Most shops planned to stay closed for the day, telephone exchanges were left unattended and even radio and television broadcasts were expected to be blacked out because the women refused to take part in the programs.

The government, determined to keep the affairs of state going despite the walkout, said it was impossible to conduct official business by telephone.

The banks had the same problem, although they tried to stay in operation by sending department heads to the counters to replace missing female cashiers.

Spokeswoman Gerdu Steinthorsdottir said the walkout was to show "how indespensable we are in our country's economy and national life.

She added: "We are not demanding any special wage increase. We are only showing that it is a great injustice that women receive lower wages."

Back Taxes Proposed

Logging firms should have to pay heavy penalties for turning Gulf Island tree farms into housing subdivisions, Dave Brousson, a director of Islands Trust, said today.

The companies originally were given major tax benefits when they declared the land Certified Tree Farms and have continued enjoying tax benefits from the special status. The companies should have to pay the foregone taxes when they turn the land to other use, he told the Royal Commission on Forest Resources.

He explained that originally logging companies requested CTF status so that they could reduce property tax and keep the land in tree production.

"Since the owner of the land entered the program knowing that such benefits would accrue over the longer term, it seems equitable to recover taxes foregone if he withdraws from the program."

He added since 1974, the land owners enjoy even greater benefit due to the dramatic increase in the assessment of non-residential land.

The penalty tax assessed should directly be related to the length of time the land has been a tree farm, and at least equal to the compound value of the difference between the taxes paid under the tree-farm certificate, he said.

Brousson said if logging companies were allowed to subdivide their land it would have major impact on some islands.

As an example, he pointed out MacMillan Bloedel in 1972 announced a plan to create up to about 2,700 small lots on a portion of their tree-farm land on Galiano Island.

This would have meant the population on the island, now 500, would have increased 15-fold to over 7,000, he said.

"Such a tremendous increase in population would have completely overwhelmed and altered the existing community," he said. "It was only after a very loud public outcry that the plan was abandoned."

NEWS BRIEFS

Hull Protests

WINNIPEG (CP) — Winnipeg Jets of the World Hockey Association said Friday superstar Bobby Hull has withdrawn temporarily from further participation in hockey to protest the growing violence and "brutality" in the game.

Juneau Quits

Classroom Burns

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — A second school fire in 10 days Thursday destroyed one classroom at a local elementary school. Damage was not estimated, but no injuries were reported and firemen were investigating. Last week eight classrooms were destroyed in a $400,000 blaze at another elementary school.

Franco Improving

MADRID (CP) — A medical bulletin issued today said the condition of Gen. Francisco Franco has improved following a mild heart attack the Spanish chief of state suffered earlier this week and a relapse Thursday.

B.C. Response Today To Ottawa Controls

The provincial cabinet met in special session today and Premier Barrett promised a statement late this afternoon on B.C.'s response to wage and price controls.

Visiting Victoria today, Sen. Ray Perrault said if any province refuses to follow the federal wage and price guidelines the whole program will collapse.

Cabinet was to hear a report from Finance Minister Dave Stupich on the two-day federal-provincial talks in Ottawa on the federal anti-inflation program.

And a key item to be discussed was a legal report on the constitutionality of separate provincial price controls.

It's expected the cabinet will discuss the possibility of bringing in its own price restraints on food and other basic commodities.

Barrett said he would have a full statement to make about 5 p.m. and there is a possibility he will go on television live this evening.

Stupich said Thursday he would recommend to cabinet that B.C. support the federal government's proposed wage and price controls, but his recommendation would have some reservations.

He is not totally satisifed with the federal plan, said Stupich, but he is convinced Ottawa really wants the plan to work.

Perrault government leader in the Senate, said in an interview the guidelines got a big boost when Ontario agreed in principle to support the program but there would have to be unanimous agreement or the program would fail.

Provincial governments have control over provincial civil servants, municipal employees and various professional groups.

He said Ottawa has asked for provincial co-operation but may have to go beyond asking to make the program work. He said it was not clear what the government would do but noted that Ottawa had wide powers under the income tax act to direct the activities of both workers and companies.

(Prime Minister Trudeau has said the government may impose a tax surcharge to take back any pay increase above the guidelines.)

Perrault said Ottawa hopes to be able to dismantle the wage and price guidelines before the three-year program has been completed.

However, rather than removing the program, Ottawa might have to make it tougher if the present program did not work, he said.

A tougher program would bring more sections of the economy under the regulations but would not go so far as a total freeze, he said. Workers would have to get raises high enough to keep up with the increases in the cost of living.

Meanwhile in Ottawa the anti-inflation bill hit a snag in the Commons Thursday when an all-party agreement to speed second reading fell apart.

Government House leader Mitchell Sharp said Thursday afternoon there was "a reasonable expectation, if not a certainty" that the bill would be given second-reading during the day and referred to the House finance committee for detailed study.

He told MPs he based his assessment on consultations with opposition House leaders, a routine practice in manoeuvring bills through various stages of parliamentary passage.

TEENAGERS HURT BY BOMB ON LAWN

Niko Burtini, 16, and his girl friend Wendy Warner, were injured when a bomb-like device went off at the Burtini home, 3061 East 23rd. The explosion was heard six blocks away. It left a hole in the front lawn, took a piece out of the concrete front steps and shattered a picture window in the home. It also shattered the side window of a car parked nearby and put a hole in a neighbor's window.

Police were uncertain whether the explosion was caused by a home-made device made up as a Halloween prank or was intended to cause damage.

They were investigating the possibilities that the device was thrown from a passing car or had been placed on the lawn with some sort of timing device.

The youth was injured in the leg and his girlfriend was hit in the body by flying debris.

Fixed Commissions Ending for Real Estate

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

The day of the fixed commission for real estate sales is ending but this does not mean there will be a price war to attract business, says Norman Ross of Victoria, newly-elected vice-president of the Canadian Real Estate Association.

Ross is chairman of a CREA committee preparing the real estate industry's response to amendments to the Combines Investigation Act, which will require service industries to have free-floating fees and commissions.

The real estate industry will move to a system of having the salesman negotiate a commission fee with the vendor, the person owning the property. These commissions under the Multiple Listing Service have varied from city to city but have usually been in the range of from 5 to 7 per cent.

For example, Vancouver firms charge 7 per cent while in Ottawa the rate is 5.5 per cent.

All real estate boards in Canada will soon receive guidelines from Ross's committee outlining procedures for negotiating commission fees.

"In practice, the rates will not change very much," Ross said. "Real estate companies will still have to be able to recover their costs."

For example, Victoria has already gone to the negotiated commission fee and the floating rate is running in the range of 5 to 6 per cent. The fixed MLS commission rate had been 6.5 per cent for the first $30,000 of a sale and a lower rate for the balance. This could average 6.2 per cent or 6 per cent, depending on the dollar value of the sale.

Now the commission rate is determined by direct negotiation between the vendor and the salesman but is not much different than the previous fixed rates.

Conditions vary from firm to firm but it would be difficult to handle a sale with a commission rate below 5 per cent, taking into consideration the advertising and office expenses and other costs of car-

UNION SEEKING POSTAL TALKS

tions officer, and postal clerk Henry Gagne said they were pushed by pickets Thursday when they attempted to enter Vancouver's main post office.

In a related development, a post office spokesman in Toronto said today that regional managers were handing notices today to the 18,000 members of the Letter Carriers Union of Canada informing them that letter-carrier service is being suspended until further notice.

Carriers and truck drivers are being told their last day of work ends at midnight tonight.

A spokesman said the letter carriers and mail couriers are not being laid off but sent home because there is no work.

They will be paid up to the end of their shifts and then will be eligible to draw unemployment insurance benefits after a two-week period.

If they were laid off, they would not be eligible for the benefits for at least six weeks and could not be recalled on short notice.

Spokesman say the current mail backlog in most major urban centres would take one day to clear up if the strike ended.

Mackasey has said a system for distributing family allowance and old-age pension cheques four months in advance will be set up, but did not give details.

In Duncan, 13 inside postal workers who had remained on the job ended their defiance of the national walkout Thursday.

Wayne Jones, assistant postmaster said the workers reported for work Thursday morning but soon after held a meeting, then walked off.

Frank Walden, a union representative, said prior to the Duncan walkout, that he would be sending a carload of members to Duncan "to see that the strike gets started there."

The workers were not being forced out on strike, he added.

Victoria Chamber of Commerce today sent a telegram to Mackasey urging Ottawa to legislate postal workers back to work for a 90-day period.

Chamber President Jack Hutchins said the strike is working a hardship on all sections of the Victoria community including retired persons and small businessmen.

The chamber executive voted Thursday to request back-to-work legislation so mail would move while contract talks continue.

B.C. Lumber Strikes Helped East

WOODSTOCK, N.B. (CP) — The chairman of the Maritime Lumber Bureau says that strikes in British Columbia have saved the lumber industry in the Maritime provinces from what could have been a disastrous year.

Cyril Ross of Maritime Lumber Ltd. said here Thursday the industry did not have as bad a year as expected.

He attributed this to a reasonable number of housing starts coupled with low West Coast production.

He said if British Columbia lumbering had been at full production, it would have saturated both the American and relatively small Maritime market.

Although he would not predict the immediate future of the lumber industry in the Maritime provinces, he said the housing industry would pick up by mid-1976.

Realtors Dropping Fixed Commissions

There might be a handful of small or new companies that may come in with low bids to attract listings but experience has shown that these companies will soon go out of business or raise their rates, Ross said.

Real estate firms cannot lower their fees very far without losing money.

One advantage of the floating fee is that it will take into account the cost of handling the individual property — and not an average cost as under the fixed fee system.

For example, it would be more expensive for a Victoria firm to sell a house in Sooke than in Saanich because of the costs involved in driving back and forth to show the house to prospective customers. The floating fee can reflect these varying costs.

An attractive property with a low price tag could expect to have a low commission fee while an unattractive property or one that has an unreasonably high price would have a higher commission, most likely, because of the extra work involved in selling it.

"If a property does not move for six months, a company will spend a great deal of money and time earning its commission. A property offered for sale must be constantly exposed and this means advertising expenses and time."

It had been common practice for real estate boards to suggest a flat commission fee in each city but this will no longer be possible once the amendments to the Combines Investigation Act become law this fall.

Provincial legislation could exempt some sections of the service industry from the full force of the Act but there are no indications the provincial government intends to exempt real estate in British Columbia.

Ross is one of two national vice-presidents elected by the Canadian Real Estate Association. He has been in real estate 21 years and on various boards and comittees for the industry for 17 years. He is a past president of the Victoria Real Estate Board and of the British Columbia Real Estate Association.

CLC BOSSES HUDDLE

Times newws Services

OTTAWA — The Canadian Labor Congress executive council went into closed-door session today to plan strategy in its battle against the federal anti-inflation program.

"It is pretty big business, so I don't know when it is going to be over," CLC president Joe Morris said before the meeting began.

Morris said Thursday night that the powerful 30-member executive council will consider establishing a fund to help its 120-member affiliate unions mount a massive lobby against the program.

A tired and drawn Labor Minister John Munro told reporters after meeting his provincial counterparts Thursday afternoon that the CLC position was to be expected.

"It is the very antithesis for collective bargaining for the CLC to subject themselves to controls," he said.

But he maintained collective bargaining still can take place with wage controls in place, even though it means that agreements cannot exceed the penalty-backed guides.

Donald Montgomery, CLC secretary-treasurer, said that the program of selective wage and price controls will fail because "provisions for controlling prices, profits and professional fees are so vague as to be meaningless."

Stan Little, past president of the 210,000-member Canadian Union of Public Employees was to go to today's meeting with CUPE's demand for a full-scale summit of all the country's labor leaders.

Cloud covered most sections of the province early this morning although a few areas are relatively clear. Occasional rain fell along the north coast. Rain spread along the coast today, reaching the lower mainland this evening. The advancing Pacific disturbance will also spread occasional snow, into the central interior later today. The disturbance accompanied by cloud and precipitation, will continue rapidly through the Interior on Saturday. Most areas will remain cloudy with considerable shower activity developing as cool moist air continues to move inland.

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — A local businessman said Thursday the provincial government has ignored his plans to construct a $5 million steel foundry here. Dick Furby, president of Polaris Steel Ltd., said a feasibility study shows sufficient demand exists regionally to support a steel foundry and so far his company has spent about $14,000 paying for the study and laying the groundwork.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Social service agencies concerned about their own image, empire building and acquiring government funds were criticized at the opening Thursday of the three-day national conference of the Canadian Mental Health Association. Patricia MacKay, president of the Canadian Council on Children and Youth, said if agencies would forget public images, empire building and territorial rights, they could more effectively supply services.

KAMLOOPS (CP) — The president of the local branch of the environmental group SPEC says there should be a plebiscite to decide if there will be a copper smelter at the Afton Mines site, eight miles west of downtown Kamloops. Don Ellsay said Thursday the organization opposes "unilateral imposition" of projects such as Afton upon the community. Construction of an $80-million copper mine and smelter was announced Tuesday.

PENTICTON (CP) — Steven Scott, 27, was remanded for one week when he appeared Thursday in provincial court charged with murder punishable by life imprisonment. He was charged after Irene Arpe, 55, formerly of New Westminster, was found dead in a trailer here during the weekend. She had been sexually assaulted and died of a broken back. Scott, formerly of Vancouver, was arrested in Fernie.

HARRISON HOT SPRINGS (CP) — Opposition Leader Bill Bennett said Thursday that Premier Barrett won't call an election this year because the redistribution commission on electoral boundaries hasn't completed its task. He also said the premier would be ducking his responsibilities if B.C. was unable to co-operate with Ottawa in price and wage controls because he was involved in an election campaign.

HARRISON HOT SPRINGS (CP) — The Amalgamated Construction Association of British Columbia Thursday estimated the 1975 value of construction in B.C. and the Yukon at $3.9 billion, up about 10 per cent from 1974. Residential building was estimated at $1,166 million, $8 million less than last year.

FORT ST. JOHN (CP) — Workers at the Peace Woods Products sawmill operation in Taylor near here have voted 90 per cent in favor of strike action. Negotiations for the 200 workers, represented by the Canadian Pulp and Paperworkers Union, broke off last week when the company decided to look at federal wage and price controls.

ENVIRONMENTAL GROUPS 'BENDING THE TRUTH'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Environmentalists who think smog and pesticides will cause the death of the world should seek out the true facts, a leading British Columbia engineer said Thursday.

"It's time to stop all these unwarranted fright stories about lethal doses of carbon monoxide accumulating over cities and the horrors of DDT," Fred Milligan, past president of the Association of Professional Engineers of B.C., told a service club.

Worst offenders in ignoring or bending the truth to shock the public in environmental matters are spokesmen of the Sierra Club, a United States-based organization dedicated to preserving wilderness areas, he charged.

"The Sierra Club often issues statements about how people will soon be dying in droves because of polluted air, or how this planet will be unable to support human life within so many years," Milligan said.

"This sort of approach is typical of people who have reached conclusions before they know anything about the subject."

There is no evidence to support claims that carbon monoxide is building up to dangerous levels in the air over the city, he said.

There is a monitoring station at a downtown intersection, he added, which shows a peak carbon monoxide concentration of about 18 parts per million parts of air.

"A cigarette smoker gets about 42,000 parts per million every time he takes a drag — and while smoking isn't healthy, it doesn't kill everybody," Milligan said.

Milligan said that according to the world health organization, DDT has reduced deaths from insect-borne diseases and 100 million people would have died without the pesticide.

"The only condemnation I can see in that is simply that the last thing the world of today needs is another 100 million people," said Milligan.

Evnironmentalists who use words such as clean, pure and natural are misleading the public because there is no such thing as unpolluted air or water — just varying degrees of contamination, Milligan added.

Leak Was Coincidence

VANCOUVER (CP) — A malfunction alarm sounded Sunday in a Greater Vancouver Water District chlorination plant but officials said Thursday the trouble had nothing to do with a major fish kill at a downstream hatchery three hours later.

Officials said the alarm and the malfunction — a leaking gasket in the chlorination equipment — could not have put chlorine into water being piped to the hatchery.

The latest Environment Canada lab tests show that two water samples from the hatchery contained a high enough concentration of chlorine to kill the salmon and samples of gill tissue from some of the dead fish show chlorine.

Details of the malfunction alarm were disclosed by Hans Krause, superintendent of operations and maintenance for the water district who said the malfunction was not serious.

The alarm sounded in the home of Dill Toms, the reservoir caretaker, and indicated a higher-than-programmed amount of chlorine was going into the domestic water supply, he said.

Toms called W. W. Daniels, the plant maintenance expert who cut back the chlorine unit, he said.

TOOK CHILD TO SPAIN

Father Jailed Six Months

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Ramon Fernandez, a 44-year-old immigrant from Spain, has been sentenced to six months in jail for taking his three-year-old daughter to Spain and depriving the mother of lawful custody of the child.

Fernandez, of Vancouver, a Canadian citizen was tried and convicted in September.

He took the child from her mother, Sheila Ryan of Vancouver, in April, 1974, but the child's exact whereabouts in Spain have not been disclosed by Fernandez.

Efforts through Interpol have not located the child, Carmen, who now is four years old. The child was born in Canada.

In passing sentence, Judge Les McDonald said he was concerned and distrubed by the "supreme selfishness" of the convicted man.

The court was told at the man's trial that he had entered into a common law relationship with the mother in 1967, and the child was born Oct. 29, 1971.

The couple separated in April, 1973, and the mother took charge of the child with Fernandez allowed visiting rights. These rights were refused in January, 1974, when Ryan said the child showed fear of her father. Fernandez continued in attempts to visit the child.

The child was seized from a car in a Haney shopping centre on April 23, 1974, while in the care of an aunt of Miss Ryan's.

Fernandez, who was arrested June 20, 1974, refused to disclose the child's whereabouts except to say she was in a Spanish convent. He was ordered by Mr. Justice A. A. Makoff in B.C. Supreme Court to produce the child by Oct. 15, 1975, but failed to do so.

A writ of attachment, initiated by Ken Atkinson, the mother's lawyer, for contempt will be processed in Supreme Court in Vancouver Oct. 29.

Crown counsel Don Mark, who asked for a stiff penalty when Fernandez appeared for sentencing, said later that Interpol had checked Fernandez' relatives in Spain but was unable to locate the child's exact whereabouts.

The defence said it had been told by the Spanish consul-general in Montreal that under Spanish law the child is Spanish and should not be returned to Canada.

Cable Bump Unlikely

VANCOUVER (CP) — Tam Deachman of Premier Cablevision said Thursday that it is "highly unlikely" the company willl bump the Seattle-based Channel 9 educational television station to make way for a Vancouver-based French language station.

Deachman, company public relations officer, was commenting on a suggestion Tuesday by Mayor Art Phillips that Channel 9 will probably have to be dropped to make room for the CBC's proposed French language outlet here.

5 Wayward Buses Show

VANCOUVER (CP) — Thursday the first five of 100 buses ordered by the British Columbia government in 1973 have arrived, Municipal Affairs Minister Jim Lorimer said Thursday.

The other 95 will arrive by early winter, Lorimer said delivery delays were due to a strike at Flyer Industries Ltd. of Manitoba.

He also announced that General Motors has been awarded a $6.6 million contract for 105 new buses.

PROVINCE WANTS REFUND

B.C. has requested the federal government return $3.5 million in duty paid by the province when it bought the Swedish vessel Stena Danica in 1974.

Transport Minister Carl Liden said Thursday he anticipates "early approval" from Ottawa for remission of the money paid under the Customs Tariff Act.

B.C. bases its claim for a return of the duty on the fact that the ship was purchased at a time when it was needed and there was no alternative ship available in the Canadian or Commonwealth market.

The duty was paid on the understanding that it was just a formality and would be remitted, said Liden.

Federal Justice Minister Ron Basford has indicated to Liden that Treasury Board would make a decision the case shortly.

A Confusion of Labels

If the harsh back-to-work legislation of the Barrett government and the stern economic controls imposed by Ottawa remain fuzzy and confused around the edges, the dramatic gestures of both governments have at least sharply focussed one unmistakable conclusion about politics in Canada.

That is the clear and absolute rupture between Canadian political parties and any traditional ideas about their operating according to certain definable principles, an identification with ideas on how to govern which were once thought to be liberal or conservative, left-wing and right-wing.

For example, who would have expected such strict anti-union legislation as Bill 146, the Collective Bargaining Continuation Act, from B.C.'s New Democratic Party administration, a labor-based party which a few short years ago condemned the Social Credit government for doing essentially the same thing?

And who would have predicted that the descendants of this former ruling party, one of B.C.'s most authoritarian governments in its 20 years in office, would now be fervent disciples of John Stuart Mill, prattling about the "freedom" they will bring back to the province?

What do you make of a federal political party, heir to a century-old tradition of free trade and laissez-faire capitalism, introducing harsh controls on the economy? Edward Blake and Sir Wilfrid Laurier must be spinning in their graves. And what of the cautious, wary, distinctly moderate Tories, from whom the Liberals stole such a plan of controls?

The old names and labels make no sense any more. Conservatives propose radical economic surgery. Socialists who are supposed to be proponents of such intervention in the economy fall back on the old liberal doctrines. The only conservatives left seem to be the young arts-and-crafts types who have gone back to the root strengths of the land — individuals whom many little old ladies might call dangerous hippie radicals.

How does one react to Flora MacDonald, who in declaring her candidacy for the leadership of the Progressive Conservatives, explained that Tory (which, oddly enough, comes from the Irish word for robber) meant someone who believes "society is organic . . . that the community is more important than the sum of its individual parts."

Whatever it means to Miss MacDonald, her definition certainly bears no resemblance to the reactionary creatures usually associated with the term.

What's happened is that Canadian politics has returned to pre-Confederation days in all but nomenclature, when there were no liberals, socialists or conservatives, only the ins and the outs, the ministerial coalition which generally supported the group in power and the oppositionists. This style of government continued in B.C.'s provincial politics until the turn of the century, administration followed administration in frequent succession without much visible difference in policies or governing principles.

We have entered a period of unpredictable politics, a no-man's land of the unfamiliar with none of the old sign-posts to give directions. Whether as politicians and citizens we grope our way out to solid ground again depends on whether we can find our own true compass bearings among the muddied tracks and muddled values in the underbrush.

An Example of Rigid Stupidity

Immigration Minister Robert Andras wonders out loud if immigrants should be forced to carry identity cards so they can't leave assigned settlements. The green paper on immigration emerges as a subtle piece of anti-immigration propaganda. Against this murky background we read how one immigrant was forced to spend $500 and fly nearly 7,000 miles to satisfy the inflexible rules and pigheadedness of the immigration department.

Aida Redoles is a Chilean woman who was visiting Canada when Salvador Allende's regime was toppled by a military junta. Redoles, who was a university student at the time, feared returning to her homeland because the new regime was tossing university people in jail. Like many of her countrymen, she applied for political asylum in Canada. A clear-cut case, apparently; she was already on-Canadian soil. Not so. A Canadian immigration rule now requires prospective immigrants to apply from outside the country. Since Redoles was here, she was obviously not eligible. Various appeals fell on deaf ears mounted on blockheads. Redoles was ordered deported.

During her 18-month battle to remain in Canada she became engaged to a Vancouver man. That meant she could be sponsored as the fiancee of a Canadian. But stringent immigration regulations forbid the altering of any deportation order once it has been upheld by the immigration appeal board. Like the monks who argued about the number of teeth in a horse's mouth without checking the source, the immigration department came up with a solution. The lady should fly to Mexico for 24 hours. On her return a postdated ministerial re-entry permit would be waiting at Toronto airport. The lady complied with this Alice in Wonderland process and the story has a happy ending.

But why did Redoles have to spend her money flying around North America just to satisfy a petty regulation? There are exceptions to every rule. Surely, the minister could have issued an order and cut through red tape. Yet it seems she might be languishing in a Chilean prison but for a return air fare. If this is an example of the inflexible thinking and tunnel vision which operates in the department, it should have a long talk with itself, before dreaming up new regulations to further confuse policies that might have been wrought by the Queen of Hearts.

Dangerous Gov't Insensitivity

OTTAWA — It would be unjust to Pierre Trudeau to argue that his desire to keep Pierre Juneau on the public payroll stems from "jobs for the boys" motives but in appearance it smacks of exactly that and at the worst possible moment.

Once again, the government is totally insensitive to the need to set good examples.

The prime minister is not above fixing up his political friends and dependents with senatorships, ambassadorships or other positions where a place at the public trough is easy to establish and maintain. His own taste for a place at the trough is, distressingly strong — the ruthless use of publicly-paid helicopters for purely political purposes, the extraordinary bills for 24 Sussex Drive and so on.

But there is no reason to doubt his sincerity when he says of Juneau:

"He's a super-man — I don't mean that in one word. He's a very good guy . . . He's a very able man and I do hope his services will be employed in some way in the public area."

Judgment Questionable

On a matter such as that, the prime minister's sincerity is not open to question but his judgment certainly is.

The original decision to take a man from a regulatory agency, a semi-judicial position, and run him as a Liberal candidate was not attractive. In principle, it is an invitation to the men who run agencies of this sort to keep political considerations more closely in mind when they should or more closely than the public interest will permit.

The idea that, having failed in his political attempt, Juneau can simply be recycled back into publicly-paid employment is equally unattractive. Public officials and top level politicians really cannot properly turn themselves into a little coterie of good chums and run it all as a private club of privileged men.

To attempt that, as the prime minister has openly toyed with doing, would not merely be wrong in principle — it would be crashingly unwise as a practical matter of government.

The new economic policy is poised in the balance. It has far from gained the confidence of the public which it must have if it is to succeed. The complexities of the entire program are beginning to unfold through the lack of answers to an increasing number of questions.

Even members of the cabinet are beginning to show awareness of the extent to which ordinary people are frightened — frightened that their incomes will be controlled but that in the end prices will not be, frightened that more favored groups will make real gains while they are held back, frightened about housing.

The need for confidence has never been greater and it does not exist today in the measure necessary to make this program a success.

It is not merely among labor unions, or the rank and file of the working people among whom confidence is damaged. That is true of the business community as well, or at any rate of some significant elements in that community. There are already known movements of capital, not a flood by any means but even so in significant amounts, from this country to the United States.

PIERRE JUNEAU

If political favoritism at the top of the government structure is to be the order of the day, as the prime minister has unwittingly suggested it may be in the Juneau case, that will not be much of a contribution to the restoration of confidence. Many things are necessary, but most of all one development: The government itself must set good examples.

Fixing up friends with jobs, no matter how good the motives, simply does not fit into that category. Transport Minister Otto Lang, by contrast, has brought a breath of fresh air into this town by his resolute attitude towards the dredging companies and their almost unbelievable bids even at a time when the industry is in great trouble, gravely discredited by the simple fact that it has been necessary to charge so many of its top executives with criminal offences. There are times when Lang's stubbornness is a reason for uneasiness but in a matter of this sort it becomes grounds for hope.

The idea that the taxpayer owes the Juneaus of the world something is faulty, although the unsuccessful Liberal candidate in Hochelaga could reasonably argue that the prime minister and his Quebec lieutenant, Marc Lalonde, owed him considerably better political advice about the feelings and trends in Montreal constituencies.

Pierre Juneau had allowed himself to develop into a czar. He was a hard-sell man with a popular line of goods, following a previous group which had not been impressive in its performance. In its earlier days, there is no doubt that the decisions of the CRTC were widely popular. It can be argued that as time went by they became increasingly autocratic and that when one decision proved to be leading in an unexpected course, Juneau found it exceedingly difficult to correct his course. Not long ago an official, who has worked closely with him but who has never been a member of the entourage he dominated, remarked that Juneau has a particularly sensitive pride. A listener remarked that the quality does not sound unattractive but the official looked shocked and replied:

Fatal Weakness

"Good God: It's his fatal weakness."

Something of this certainly showed in his astonishing struggle with Laurent Picard, then head of the the CBC, over commercial broadcasting. Juneau appeared to be trying to take over control of the CBC if not of the government. In the end, he has left behind a broadcasting structure that now needs independent and not uncritical re-examination.

The case against allowing the heads of regulatory agencies to become czars is very strong. They normally serve for lengthy terms — seven to 10-year appointments are normal — and probably they should not be re-appointed after their first term. Had Juneau not run for parliament, he would have been the dominant person in shaping Canadian broadcasting for almost a decade and a half. That would have been too long a time for one man to have carte blanche in setting his personal imprint on an important aspect of national life.

He has performed services for which the country can thank him generously. But there is no unfulfilled debt.

HAROLD GREER

Contempt Reform Necessary

TORONTO — The historic common law power of judges to deal summarily with contempt of court has for some reason been remarkably free of legislative interference. It is only in relatively recent years that the politicians, moved perhaps by public concern over civil rights, have ventured to surround this judicial prerogative with a few modest restrictions.

Before 1954, for example, a conviction and or punishment for contempt of court could not even be appealed. A person could be summarily despatched to prison for such time as the judge saw fit, and only by such extraordinary remedies as a writ of Habeas corpus could he get another court to examine whether he had been lawfully and properly imprisoned.

When the Canadian parliament moved to correct this in 1954, it moved at a snail's pace. It inserted in the criminal code a right of appeal, for both conviction and punishment, when the contempt was not "in the face of the court." For contempts in the face of the court (generally a more serious degree of offence), it allowed an appeal against punishment only.

Further Amendments

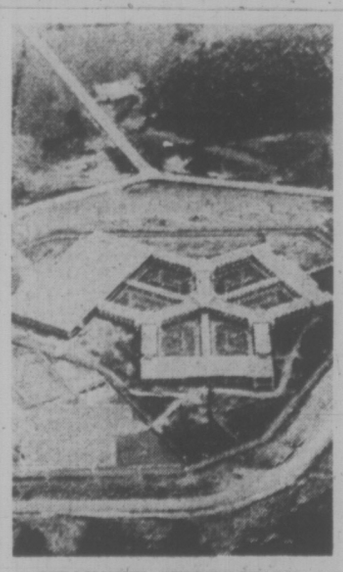
It was not until 1972 that the code was further amended to allow for appeals against conviction in the case of contempts in the face of the court.

One suspects that in the case of McKeown vs The Queen, decided by the supreme court of Canada in 1971, was instrumental in getting the government of the day to act. It is a classic example of what can happen in leaving contempt cases to the common law and the interpretation of judges alone.

Stewart McDeown was a Toronto lawyer retained by a person against whom the crown was making an application to have declared an habitual criminal. A hearing was set for Sept. 9, 1969, before Judge Walter Martin of York County Court and adjourned to Sept. 1 after the court was advised McKeown could not appear because of illness.

McKeown did not appear on Sept. 10 either, the explanation being, according to the Crown counsel, that he was under doctor's care. But Judge Martin said McKeown had telephoned him earlier that day to say he would appear and had said nothing about being sick. He therefore ordered McKeown to show cause why he should not be cited for contempt.

In the contempt proceedings, Judge Martin was both prosecutor, witness and judge. He delivered what he called a "statement of facts" upon which he refused to be cross-examined by McKeown's counsel. He then called three witnesses, one of whom was a police officer who observed McKeown in the lobby of the court-house on the morning of Sept. 1 and formed the opinion that he was drunk.



MILLHAVEN PENITENTIARY
. . . where Jonhston imprisoned

Two other witnesses, a courthouse administarator and a commissionaire, also observed McKeown that day and testified he was obviously ill. The administrator thought he was either under the influence of alcohol or drugs or was mentally ill. The commissionaire swore he smelt no liquor and described McKeown as "in complete shell shock."

McKeown in his defence said he had gone to the court-houe feeling dizzy and, on reaching the robing room, had to lie down. He then lost consciousness and was subsequently taken to hospital by an assistant and then to a doctor, who diagnosed his condition as diabetes. Tests confirmed this diagnosis and the doctor confirmed McKeown's testimony.

Judge Martin, however, concluded that McKeown had been drunk and that his failure to appear for that reason was contempt in the face of the court.

McKeown appealed but since the law as it was then written did not permit an appeal against a conviction for contempt in the face of the court, he got nowhere on the Ontario court of appeal. By special leave he got his case to the supreme court of Canada, where a majority upheld the decision.

Fair Process

In a marvellous, exhaustive and subtle examination of the issues, however, Mr. Justice (now Chief Justice Bora Laskin) dissented. He argued that McKeown's contempt, if contempt it was, was not in the face of the court and therefore an appeal did lie. He also argued there was no proper finding of contempt in the first place because Judge Martin had not conducted his hearing according to the cardinal principles of fair process.

It is still possible, as the recent case of Edward Johnston demonstrated, for superior court judges (inferior courts are another matter) to put people in jail for contempt without a trial and to levy such punishment as they please.

The necessary reform it seems to me, can be easily stated and effected. No one should be imprisoned without a fair trial, and this could be assured simply by legislating a definition of contempt into the criminal code, as, for example, the disobedience without reasonable excuse of a lawful order made by the court of justice. No one can be convicted of violating the Code without first being tried, at least not legally.

Who Governs?

How stupid do they think you and I are? We know inflation is gradually drowning us at an annual rate of 10 per cent or more, but the 22 million of us in Canada provide jobs for 22,000 workers who now demand increases of six to seven times the rate of inflation! They, our own inside postal workers, paid by our taxes, are insisting that we live on even less so they can force prices up and inflation rates higher by having us pay them up to 71 per cent more! Can you believe it?

A minority of one-tenth of one percent can make these selfish, ridiculous demands on the other 99.9 per cent of us because mail delivery is an essential service. This minority is holding you and me as hostages, including so many suffering pensioners whose fixed incomes buy 10 per cent less each year, because without mail service severe hardships, financial strain and disruptions will occur. What kind of democracy is it that allows a tiny minority to force its will and these hardships on the majority and do so much harm to a great country? What kind of people do this?

There is a parallel. We are told that only six per cent of all Russians are members of the Communist party and they control the other 94 per cent. But this is Canada, where the people — you and I — are the government, right? Or are we? Do powerful minorities control us, too?

If the majority governs, we — the taxpayers who pay postal wages — can solve the problem:

1. Give these workers the new eight per cent federal guideline increase, plus 2 per cent if they increase productivity.

2. Declare strikes against government illegal.

3. Impose huge fines against unions and individuals who strike against government.

4. Require prison terms for union leaders who conduct such strikes, plus fines and-or imprisonment for those who prevent government's operations by picketing, etc.

5. Immediately discharge those who do not report for work as usual, replacing them with those now unemployed.

6. Automatically add to our government employees' pay cheques the exact amount of the cost of living increase each succeeding year to keep them even with inflation.

How do we wish to live in Canada? A substantial majority are not unionized, although many are forced to join unions to obtain and keep a job. A freedom has been lost. Is this democracy? Is Canada to be governed by the majority, or more and more by union power? If you and I are stupid enough to allow this trend to continue we will deserve to lose our freedoms. Time is running out.— R. W. Wright, Victoria.

Cases arising out of the arrest by licence inspector Hatcher and police constable Bishop of three Indians and two white men on lower Johnson Street at noon on Saturday occupied a good deal of time in the police court. One of the whites was charged with supplying liquor to Indians, the same man having been in trouble in the same connection before.

'Status Quo America' Resents New York City

By HERBERT J. GANS

(Gans is professor of sociology at Columbia University. He wrote this article for the New York Times.)

Despite a recent poll that showed that the majority of Americans favored federal help for New York's financial problems, many people west of the Hudson do not like the city. Other large cities are also unpopular, of course, but New York — particularly Manhatten — is the best-known and thus the stereotypical American city, so that television comics will joke only about muggings in Central Park even though the crime rate is much higher in Detroit or Philadelphia.

New York is disliked partly because it is different — for example, as a city of apartment houses in a society that worships the single-family house. More important, its population mix diverges sharply from the WASP idea — and some even argue that the animus toward New York is simply an anti-Semitic reaction to its large Jewish population.

Still the primary cause of the city's unpopularity lies elsewhere. New York provides many essential services to the rest of the country, but of a kind that many other Americans do not want to consider essential — or just do not want to think about.

★ ★ ★

For example, New York has always taken the lead in welcoming and integrating poor immigrants into American society, but while that society has used their cheap labor to perform the necessary dirty work, it has also often wished the immigrants had never come.

New York also treats its poor somewhat more humanely than other communities, setting an example that evokes both opposition and guilt elsewhere.

New York has long served as the country's principal innovator in public policy, carrying out new programs that have first been condemned as too extreme by other communities, and then grudgingly accepted by them. More often than not, the innovations have been liberal — for example, public housing and the war on poverty were "invented" here, thus angering conservative politicians everywhere.

In addition, the city provides the country with much of its social and other criticism—and is home to many of the nation's radical critics and activists. Every society needs its critics even while it condemns them, but because New York is virtually identified with questioning the status quo, the city enrages those who endorse the status quo or would rather not think about its shortcomings.

At the same time, New York houses Wall Street, the so-called Eastern Establishment, and the country's best-known members of high-and cafe-society, teaching ambitious Americans elsewhere how to spend their wealth, but also incurring the disapproval of those who object to conspicuous consumption.

Then too, New York supplies the country with much of its high culture, making it a convenient target for all those who dislike both it and the occasional disdain of the high culture elite toward the "uncultured."

Concurrently the city is headquarters for the mass news media, so that it is also blamed for the "bad" news reported by television, and for the country's popular culture generally — even if these same media bend over backwards to keep New York ideas and topics out of their fare.

Finally, New York sells excitement to many American tourists, enough of it illicit or disreputable to enable them to condemn the sinfulness of the city after they have enjoyed its fleshpots.

In short, New York is, among other things, America's principal poorhouse, innovator, dissident, creditor, playboy, and stripper, and the rest of the country is reluctant to admit to itself that it uses or needs these things.

Americans beyond the Hudson would be discomfited if these functions were no longer performed, and they would be terrified to have them performed in their own communities, but until either begins to happen, the city's contribution to the rest of America will probably not be recognized.

As a result, public relations campaigns to improve New York's "image" are unlikely to work; in addition, no other city is willing or able to take over New York's national roles — or its stereotype as the urban villain. Los Angeles simply does not look like a city, San Francisco is too pretty, and Chicago has acclaimed itself successfully as the City Efficient, while hiding the brutality that often accompanies efficiency.

Consequently, New York has no other alternative but to start charging the rest of the country for some of the national services it supplies. Perhaps city officials should try to find a way of withholding some of the $20-billion in federal taxes New Yorkers pay until Washington supports New York as a national resource.

City officials should also consider special taxes on New York's banks that use the city to make profits elsewhere, and on those of the city's other firms that supply services mainly to the rest of the country. These taxes can always be passed along in higher prices to the many Americans who dislike New York even while they benefit from its existence.

Historic Pipeline Debate Begins

By JEFF CARRUTHERS

OTTAWA — With natural gas shortages predicted for 1976 or 1977, the National Energy Board is preparing to launch public hearings on an issue of historic consequence to Canada's future energy supplies and prices.

On Monday, in the elegant Chateau Laurier ballroom, N.E.B. Chairman Marshall Crowe will set in motion the long-awaited public hearings to decide the fate of a Mackenzie Valley natural gas pipeline.

Should it be built, in the Canadian public interest? And if so, by whom?

Canadian Arctic Gas Pipeline Ltd. of Toronto, a consortium of Canadian and American petroleum and gas transmission companies, wants to build a joint Canada-U.S. pipeline to carry Alaskan gas to hungry U.S. markets and Mackenzie Delta gas to Canadian users in the south.

Foothills Pipelines Ltd. of Calgary, waving the Canadian flag, wants to build an all-Canadian pipeline that would use a slightly smaller diameter pipeline system, costing about half the price of the joint Canada-U.S. project, to bring slightly more Canadian gas to Canadian users.

They both want to build it for use starting in 1979-80, though Foothills would prefer to see Canadian supplies from conventional southern reserves extended and a northern pipeline delayed for a few years. This would allow time for more Mackenzie Delta gas to be found and would ease the pressures building up on Parliament Hill to approve a Mackenzie Valley pipeline soon.

Canadian Arctic Gas seems to have the most momentum behind its proposal to build a $7-billion northern pipeline as part of a $10-billion joint Canada-U.S. scene to carry both Mackenzie Delta and Alaskan gas to southern markets.

Foothills, formed by Westcoast Transmission Co. of Vancouver and The Alberta Gas Trunk Line Co. of Calgary, is considered by most to be the underdog.

But because of a combination of spunk, initiative, a flag-waiving image, and the possibility that the U.S. Congress might opt for an all-American project to carry Alaskan gas, the smaller, $4-billion "Maple Leaf" pipeline project is expected to be a tough oponent.

Alberta Natural Gas Co. Ltd., which is associated with the Canadian Arctic Gas proposal, has also requested permission to expand existing pipeline facilities from Alberta across British Columbia to the U.S. Pacific Northwest, to carry Alaskan gas to its parent companies in California.

Westcoast has applied to build a lateral system into B.C., preferably as part of the Foothills project. But Westcoast has said it would connect with Canadian Arctic Gas facilities if the Foothills application is denied.

Perhaps as an indication of the type of legal maneuvering and obstacles which could plague and delay the N.E.B. hearings, Chairman Crowe first will have to dispense with a legal challenge to the propriety of his participation.

Canadian Arctic Gas has expressed fears that Crowe's previous association with Canadian Arctic Gas Study Group and his participation in a number of key executive meetings covering such matters as route selection could be used as the basis for a legal challenge by another party to the hearings in the event the N.E.B. gives the nod of approval to Canadian Arctic Gas.

Crowe was president of the government-owned Canadian Development Corp. Before being appointed as chairman of the N.E.B., he represented the CDC at Canadian Arctic Gas consortium meetings and was a director of the consortium.

Canadian Arctic Gas is hoping all other participants will waive their right to challenge if Crowe should stay on the N.E.B. panel.

Already, Foothills has declared it has no doubts about the impartiality of Mr. Crowe's impartiality.

But Canadian Arctic Gas is likely more concerned about El Paso Alaska Co., which has been allowed to participate in the N.E.B. hearings despite vigorous objections by the Canadian Arctic Gas companies.

Down West Coast

El Paso is proposing an all-American gas transportation system, using a trans-Alaska pipeline and liquified natural gas tankers travelling down the west coast. The proposal, estimated to cost at least $6-billion, is now being considered by the U.S. Federal Power Commission, along with the Canadian Arctic Gas project being put forward in the U.S. by Alaskan Arctic Gas.

For convenience, the pipeline hearing has been divided into six parts, with breaks between each and with different filing deadlines for prepared testimony from participants. The first three will deal with gas supply and demand; the fourth will examine facilities design, operation and maintenance, and construction timing, along with alternative systems; the fifth, financial details; and the sixth, public interest considerations, including many of the areas already under examination by the "Berger" judicial inquiry on the impact of a pipeline on the North that has been underway since the spring.

Already, some of the elements of conflict between the two major projects are evident.

Canadian Arctic Gas hopes to piggyback the relatively small Mackenzie Delta reserves on much larger — 24 to 26 trillion cubic feet — Alaskan reserves. The consortium estimates that there are only 6.2 trillion cubic feet of gas in the Delta. Sproule Associates Ltd., consultants to Canadian Arctic Gas, say that of this the proved gas reserves total 3.83 trillion cubic feet.

Foothills, which proposes to use 42-inch diamter pipe instead of 48-inch pipe, estiamtes there are 7.5 trillion cubic feet of marketable gas reserves in the Delta—enough to start-up an all-Canadian pipeline on a pool by gas pool basis and to spur exploraton and development to prove up additional gas reserves to make the Foothills pipeline economical and to keep it filled over its lifetime.

Canadian Arctic Gas argues there isn't enough gas in the Delta to warrant a Canadian-only pipeline, a view shared by federal Indian and Northern Affairs Minister Judd Buchanan.

Canadian Arctic Gas has actually dropped its estimates of Delta reserves from the 7 trillion cubic feet figure of about a year ago.

Foothills, recognizing the significant weakness of its proposal, is preparing an argument for the N.E.B. hearing to the effect that Canada could continue to use conventional gas reserves until at least 1982, without having to cut back exports to the United States.

This, according to Foothills, would give Canada more time to decide about a northern pipeline and would provide more time to prove up sufficient Delta reserves to support an all-Canadian pipeline.

The large gas reserves held by Alberta and Southern Gas Co. Ltd. could be produced at maximum, with the gas surplus to the Alberta and Southern export commitments then being made available to central and eastern Canada.

Swap With Alberta

Alberta also has offered to swap some of its 30-year supply of gas reserves project for Alberta use for future northern gas, so that even more Alberta gas in the short-term could be made available to users outside the province.

Both Canadian Arctic Gas and Foothills say that they could have a pipeline operating by 1979 if regulatory hearings don't stretch on too long.

They both agree that without some action to either increase deliverability of conventional gas supplies or drastically cutback on demand, Canada will face a supply shortage by the end of the decade, possibly sooner.

Even after a pipeline is built, another shortage will loom in the mid-1980s as domestic demand grows and conventional supplies decline.

Two other issues expected to attract a lot of attention at the NEB hearings are financing and native land claims.

On the latter, Northern Affairs Minister Buchanan said recently that the federal government is prepared to grant a right of way to a northern pipeline even if the native land claims have not been settled.

This assumes the government decides a pipeline would be in the Canadian public interest, based on an N.E.B. recommendation. Any such approval would also be without prejudice, he says, to subsequent land claim settlements.

Whether this promise of action will be sufficient to prevent legal delays or even financing problems remains to be seen.

Even without the spectre of land claim difficulties, financing is going to be a problem, especially for the more expensive joint Canada-U.S. scheme.

Fears have already been expressed in financial and government quarters that the bond market won't provide the 75 per cent debt financing without a pipeline completion guarantee.

If the North Slope and Mackenzie Delta producers aren't willing or able to provide such a guarantee, then it might be up to government to provide the necessary guarantees — something that could result in lower rates of return for participants in the pipeline project.

On a more emotional level, the issue of Canadian ownership and control is bound to provide some intreresting moments later in the hearing. Both pipeline groups have already been making a point to claim that they are more Canadian than the other.

Foothills notes that it will take less Canadian investment to buy 100 percent control of its project and that no U.S. approvals are needed.

Canadian Arctic Gas argues that because it will deliver gas sooner and cheaper to Canadians, its project is more Canadian. In fact, it suggests that Foothills might be under the control of Alberta or that at a minimum there would be jurisdictional problems, since Foothills proposes to use existing Alberta pipelines which are not now under federal jurisdiction.

If any of the companies participating in the N.E.B. hearings expect to be finished by mid-1976, as former Federal Energy Minister Donald Macdonald suggested not too long ago, they might consider the more recent prediction by Northern Affairs Minister Buchanan, who sees the federal government making a decision on the pipeline late in 1976 — at the earliest.

Meddlers in God's Work

The Washington discussion of New York's financial trouble is taking a curious turn toward theology. This has been apparent lately in various suggestions from Washington that New York must undergo purification by suffering if it is to receive federal absolution.

It is unfair to single out the Ford circle of hard-money Republicans as defenders of the uplift-through-agony preachment, for congressional Democrats from suburbs, smaller towns and the jimpsonweed belt appear to be equally devoted. Nevertheless, it is the Ford men, and principally Treasury Secretary Simon, who have led the discussion into the paths of righteousness.

Simon, a former Wall Street trader, which is to say a gambler with social cachet, has assumed the role of Torquemada, protecting the faith by applications of pain. Before an agreeable Congress, he urges that punitive weights be brought — still more taxes — to be pressed on a city already breaking on the rack of taxation.

His principal, President Ford, travels the country warning the faithful to shun new York's bond offerings until it has purged itself of sundry heresies and done penanace through pain. Dr. Arthur Burns and Nelson Rockefeller appear here and there, bestowing their apostolic blessings on the inquisitional labors of Simon and Ford, and the Congress concurs.

New York must suffer.

An observable fact about the notion that suffering builds character and improves the moral fibre is that its most vigorous proponents are usually people who haven't missed a meal in 10 years. Very often, these comfortable believers in misery are people who have experienced hardship in childhood, as in the case of the president.

Such people may sentimentalize hardship once time has cast a pleasant haze over its memory, account it the strengthening force that built what they assumed to be their splendid characters and, in truly bad cases, prescribe it indiscriminately for everyone.

There is a certain churchly value in the attitude that suffering is a fine improver of man. Suffering is the human condition. In any philosophy of an organized, purposeful cosmos, suffering must therefore be justified, and in the Christian view that the cosmos is organized toward beneficent ends, it is commonly justified as an experience man must undergo to arrive at goodness.

Government, on the other hand, is not church. It is all very well for clergy to bring such spiritual ease as they can against suffering by emphasizing its potential for human development, but when we turn to the government it is for temporal easement, not spiritual.

Ford and Simon preaching the virtue that will overcome New York through suffering are as remote from reality as a priest sermonizing about the economic benefits of raising the interest rate on Treasury notes.

We need not dwell on the sweet ironies of politicians instructing us in the art of building character and improving moral fibre. Nor is Ford's pardon of Richard Nixon on ground that he had suffered enough without being brought to trial particularly relevant.

Angry New Yorkers, not a pro-Nixon breed on the whole, accused the President of hypocrisy in declaring that Nixon had suffered enough, but that New York must suffer more. This is the muddled logic of rage, for since it implies that Ford should not have considered the relief of suffering in the Nixon case, it follows that he should not consider it in the case of New York either. On this logic, Ford's present position is entirely reasonable.

In fact, both the Nixon case and New York's are political. Despite some pieties about ending Nixon's suffering, his pardon was politically sagacious. Without it, the administration would probably be under constant daily embarrassment as the Nixon case wound its tedious way through the courts well into the coming election year.

The problem for the country is to persuade the Ford people to deal equally realistically with New York's financial trouble. Theology is no help here.

"New York must suffer" may be an engaging pulpit theme, but politically it is rotten economics at a time when Ford needs an economic break. Still higher taxes proposed by Simon will speed the passage of the taxpaying city to kinder climates, deepening the city's debt.

The 15-cent increase in bus and subway fares, seized upon last summer as a token of the city's willingness to accept the hair shirt, has had the predictable result of cutting mass transit use at a time when the government's energy policy demands more mass transit.

The huge firings of city workers needed to produce the famous balanced budget will shift new masses of unemployed persons on to various federal relief budgets at a time government policy is aimed at cutting these budgets.

The suffering of New York may, in the end, improve its moral fibre a jot or two, though it seems dubious, but in the process of doing spiritual good, Washington will have compounded its own temporal problems. Washington should get back to Caesar's work, and leave God's to the vicar.

Special Notice from the Workers' Compensation Board of British Columbia

FOR WORKERS
If you are injured on the job you should obtain a Form 6 from your nearest W.C.B. office (listed below) and return the completed form to the office.

If you belong to a union and have difficulty making an application for compensation during the current postal uncertainties, an official of your union may be able to help.

FOR EMPLOYERS
Please deliver completed Form 7's to your nearest W.C.B. office. Employers are requested to deliver payments in the same way. The occurrence of a disruption in mail service is not necessarily a valid excuse to avoid penalties for late payment.

Employers requiring coverage or enquiring about coverage should contact their nearest W.C.B. office.

FOR DOCTORS
Please telephone your nearest W.C.B. office and advise our staff that you have some completed Form 8's. Someone from our office will then come and collect the forms from you. You may also bring the Form 8's to a W.C.B. office yourself.

NOTE: W.C.B. cheques for injured workers may be picked up from the W.C.B. office handling the claim.

Those persons expecting a compensation cheque should first phone the W.C.B. office to determine if the cheque is ready to be picked up. Please bring identification with you when you pick up your cheque. Persons who are physically unable to collect their cheque may send someone else with written authority to pick it up. Callers are requested to have their claim number available when they telephone in order to avoid delay.

The Canadian Union of Postal Workers has been informed of and has no objection to these procedures.

Hopes of B.C. Mining Men Rise

Two representatives of the British Columbia and Yukon Chamber of Mines said Thursday they are more optimistic about the future of mining in B.C. after meeting with Mines Minister Gary Lauk.

Chamber manager Frederick Higgs and W. St. C. Dunn, chamber vice-president, said that although they got no commitments from Lauk during the one-hour meeting, they are hopeful the government will make some changes.

"It takes a little give and take from both sides and he's going to have to make some changes," Dunn said. "I think he realizes that."

The chamber representatives said they expect the government will move quickly once it decides to make changes to mining legislation.

"He didn't give a time for our next meeting, but he realizes the immediate concern," said Dunn.

In a brief presented during the meeting, the chamber blamed the provincial government for forcing the mining industry into "three years of decline when the demand for some mineral products has never been stronger and price records for some recorded."

"Quite apart from the deplorable federal-provincial conflict over resource revenue, which was precipitated by provincial initiatives, the major problems for the mining industry originated with the provincial government," the brief says.

The brief accuses the government of formulating new mining and tax laws "without taking into consideration the complexities of the mining industry."

The brief recommends that:

—Taxation of mineral revenue should be based on profits;

—the right to mine should be reattached to mineral claims;

—The discretionary powers given the cabinet, the minister of mines, and department personnel in all mining statutes be removed;

—Rentals on mineral claims should be eliminated.

FREE TRADE FEARED

Canada is ill-prepared for the competition of free trade, a Vancouver economist and businessman said Thursday.

George Bogdanow, senior vice president of finance and a director of Great West Steel Industries Ltd., told a seminar conducted by the British Columbia division of the Canadian Manufacturer's Association and the Economic Council of Canada that he has doubts about implementation of free trade.

"We don't question the desirability of removing the tariffs and trade barriers and we do recognize the benefits which will accrue to Canada at large, but more than 100 years of tariff protection has ill-equipped us to withstand the strong winds of free trade competition."

He said substantial assistance was needed to enable industry to adjust gradually to avoid major economic upheaval.

The purpose of the seminar was to discuss the council's recent report which encourages Canada to adopt a free trade policy. It was the fifth meeting to be held across the country by the council.

Csaba Hajdu, an economist with MacMillan Bloedel Ltd., a forest company, said a gradual program of tariff reductions would facilitate an orderly withdrawal of labor and capital resources from sectors of industry likely to be hit by free trade.

Herbert Lewis, general sales manager of Cominco Ltd. said he believed the nonferrous mining industry would favor free trade but Canada did not have minerals which were in scarce supply.

"To my company it has already become painfully clear buyers are very much back in control of the market," he said.

9% Increase Seen for '76

MONTREAL (CP)—Prices will increase an average of 9.06 per cent in 1976 despite federal price and wage controls, a survey of 13 Montreal economists shows.

This 9.06-per-cent increase—more than one per cent above the goal of the government's anti-inflation program—reflected the average of predictions ranging from seven to 12 per cent. The over-all inflation rate for 1975 is expected to be 10 per cent.

The economists' aveage prediction for the 1976 unemployment rate was 7.5 per cent. Actual forecasts ranged between seven per cent and 9.5 per cent.

The predicted average increase in 1976 of the real value of all Canadian production—Gross National Product (GNP)—was 4.9 per cent. This would follow a stagnant performance in 1975, the economists predicted.

"Over-all, it's not a terribly rosy picutre," said Paul King, of Informetrica Ltd.

Nine of the 13 economists said the federal government's anti-inflation program will either retard or have no effect on expected economic growth. Others avoided the issue or were uncertain.

Promises of limited government spending were regarded by most as an economic depressant. Funds to lead an economic recovery, therefore, must come from other sources.

"The consumer will really have to lead the way," said George Saba of Greenshields Inc. There are some indications consumer confidence is increasing, he said.

Many retail outlets have noticed slight increases in activity since June. Statistics also suggest the consumer has more money to spend because of increases in personal savings.

Saba said successful controls may put off many fears of recession and inflation and encourage more consumer spending.

business

Premier Cablevision

Premier Cablevision said it has written off its investment in Albion Cablevision Ltd., a United Kingdom subsidiary which it bought less than two years ago for $670,000.

The announcement was made in reporting earnings of $2,293,000 or 71 cents a share for the year ended Aug. 31. This compares with earnings of $2,849,000 or 88 cents a share in the previous year.

Directors said operating revenues for the year rose to $27.8 million from $23.7 million but increase expenses reduced profit.

Weldwood

Weldwood of Canada Ltd. reported a net loss of $440,000 or 12 cents a share for the three months ended Sept. 30, compared with a profit of $1 million or 18 cents a share during the same period last year.

A company news release said third-quarter sales were $63,065,000 million compared with $62,989,000 last year.

Thomas A. Buell, president and chief executive officer, attributed the losses to a strike by pulp workers which closed nine of the company's 10 British Columbia plywood plants and sawmills.

Buell said he could not foresee significant recovery in the domestic and export pulp, lumber and plywood markets, but he expected domestic market demand to improve enough for a fourth-quarter profit.

Asmera Oil

Three Calgary oil companies led by the Asmera Oil Corp. Ltd. have signed a contract with the Indian state-owned Oil and Natural Gas Commission to start oil exploration in the Cavery Basin off the southwestern coast of India.

The contract is for a 24-year period and involves production-sharing arrangements with the commission.

The two other companies in the group includes Canadian Superior Oil, Ltd. and North Canadian Oils Ltd.

Westinghouse

Westinghouse (Canada) Ltd. said that its international sales division has been awarded a $2.6-million contract by Shahpur Chemical Co. of Abadan, Iran, to supply a 15,000-kilowatt gas turbine power plant.

Cornat Industries

Cornat Industries Ltd. reported consolidated net earnings of $3.9 million or 77 cents a share for the nine-months ended Sept. 30 compared to earnings of $6.2 million on $1.30 a share for the same period last year.

A company news release the resumption of work in major British Columbia industries will increase the demand for services provided by Cornat's operating companies and that should increase profits during the fourth quarter.

The release said Cornat intended to comply with the federal government's recently-announced wage and price guidelines.

Canadian Crime Seen as U.S. Rub-Off

OTTAWA (CP) — Two senators who want a Senate investigation attribute crime and violence in Canadian society to the influence of the United States on moral values.

"We live beside the most crime-ridden country in the world, the country with the most guns," says 80-year-old Fred McGrand, who was practising medicine in New Brunswick in the roaring '20s.

"The United States not only has the most violent television programs in the world but is the most violent society in the world," Sen. McGrand said in a speech advocating creation of a Senate Committee to take a serious look at crime and violence in Canada.

He was joined this week by another Liberal, Senator Chesley Carter of Newfoundland, who said that "changes in moral values" had been blamed by U.S. investigators for the crime rate there.

"If we are to look for the causes of crime and violence in our society, we must study the changes that have taken place in our society and the influences that have produced these changes," Sen. Carter, said.

WILL DIEF BE CHIEF AGAIN?

Will "Dief the Chief," just turned 80 and riding a renewed surge of popularity with the appearance of his memoirs, do battle once again for the leadership of his party — and the country?

Peter Stursberg, who has just had published the first of two volumes on the former prime minister's fascinating rise and fall, thinks it unlikely.

"I think Olive (Diefenbaker's wife) would be very much opposed. But you never know. I may have a third volume — 'Leadership Regained'," he said Thursday.

Stursberg is in Victoria promoting 'Diefenbaker: Leadership Gained,' an account of the years 1956 to 1962 based on the "recorded table talk of cabinet ministers and other insiders." His second volume, 'Diefenbaker: Leadership Lost, 1962-67,' will be out a year from now.

Journalist and author, Stursberg began his newspaper career as farm and garden editor for the Victoria Times, from 1934 to 1938. His parents, Arthur and Mary, live at Oak Bay Manor.

The book's format is a blending of recorded opinions from those in the know, including most of the former Conservative cabinet—Fleming, Hamilton, Hees, Churchill, Balcer, Fulton, Fairclough—on events and issues as they blossomed or exploded on the political scene. Opponents—Douglas, Martin, Pickersgill—have their say.

Stursberg sees the technique, so-called "oral history," as the modern idiom, the new kind of history book and he sees this advantage:

"The average person is much more interesting when he talks than when he writes."

He sees his book as "a companion piece" to the first of the Chief's own three-volume memoirs which has just appeared.

"His is Diefenbaker looking at Diefenbaker. Mine is his associates looking at him."

And what does Diefenbaker think?

Stursberg has given him a copy and "I don't think he likes certain parts of it. But I don't think he's very disturbed by it either. He's been autographing some.

"If it said only good things, I would have been accused of a whitewash. As it is, I think it's balanced but balanced in his favor."

The current tragedy of the Conservative party, Stursberg said, is that with the Liberals vulnerable, there is no successor to retiring leader Robert Stanfield.

LOGGING BRIEF QUERIES BANNED

A former president of the Victoria Sierra Club was cut off by the Royal Forest Resource Commission Thursday from questioning a brief submitted by the Independent Loggers Association.

Dr. Peter Pearse said John Willow had not registered to permit him to question briefs — a procedure the commission has established since its inception.

Willow is a well known structural engineer, but worked for a number of years as a logger. He was the man who drew attention to the plight of salmon in the Tofino area in 1972. The fish were dying because logging debris had been dumped into creeks and they couldn't get to their spawning grounds.

He also produces documentary films for the CBC Klahanie series.

Willow was about to question certain aspects of the association brief when Pearse asked him if he had registered his name with the commission.

It was the first time Pearse challenged a member of the audience on the question of registration since hearings began in Victoria.

Later Willow slaid Pearse was technically correct but had the authority to relax the ruling.

"I told him that I didn't think the commission needed any machinery to control a meeting composed of about 25 people who were half asleep," he said.

"I couldn't see any riot to control," he added.

Willow said the logic of the commission's action escaped him.

Land-use controls should be imposed on large private tree farms, Syd. C. Watts of Duncan, of the Vancouver Island section, Alpine Club of Canada, said Thursday.

Addressing the Royal Commission on Forest Resources, he singled out as an example the E&N Belt, a large holding taking up a quarter of Vancouver Island and owned by CPR.

"In large areas like that we are going to have to impose some form of controls to protect the environment, he said.

Commission chairman Dr. Peter Pearse asked why small private tree farms should be excluded from controls.

He said from his observations small tree farms often looked messier than the larger ones after they had been logged.

Club chairman Gilbert Parker, 78 Linden Ave., also appearing at the hearing, agreed it would be unfair to make the owner of a large tree farm clean up his mess and to leave the owner of a smaller farm get away with it.

On the subject of access to pubic forest lands, Watts said mainline logging roads should be built to a standard fit for public use and should be open permanently to the public and maintained by the logging company until taken over by the provincial highways department.

Active branch roads should be open for recreation during non-logging hours and at weekends and should not he blocked by heavy equipment at weekends, he said.

"Weekend logging must never be permitted for that is the only time people can get into areas being actively logged," he added.

Public access on logging roads was also desirable for another reason, he said.

"It permits the public to check up on what loggers are up to," he said.

He explained loggers who know their activities are seen by the public tend to make less mess and follow the rules more conscientiously than if they think no-one sees what they do.

"Anyone who has observed the mess made by the logging industry in remote areas such as the west coast of Vancouver island, where they though no one would notice, is only too well aware of this," he said.

The club in its brief recommended stream and bank protection, such as leaving adequately wide unlogged strips along them.

Special attention should be given to protection marshy flats or meadows around lakes, it added.

John. S. Gibson, Cowichan Station, B.C., was also a witness on behalf of the club.

Further Hearing Scheduled

Dr. Peter Pearse, conducting a one-man royal commission into British Columbia's forest resources, said Thursday an extra hearing will be held here Wednesday to allow him to question the B.C. Forest Service.

He said he will query the service on, among other things, the development of the quota system used in allocation of timber rights.

A forest service spokesman said later that the main part of the government branch's brief will be heard next month in Vancouver. He said he expected next week's hearing would mainly involve questions.

Larger Oil Price Increase

CARACAS, Venezuela (CP) — The price of Venezuelan crude oil imported into Eastern Canada will increase by about $1.04 a barrel, retroactive to Oct. 1, as part of the 10 per cent increase in Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries' world oil prices, according to Venezuelan Oil Minister Valentin Hernandez.

The increase is considerably higher than earlier reports out of Venezuela that the country's crude oil taxes would only increase by between 75 and 87 cents a barrel.

While the consumer in Eastern Canada won't notice the difference at the oil pump, the Venezuelan announcement will require substantial increase in the federal government's oil import subsidy program payments, which, in turn, will mean a larger deficit in Canada's oil accounts.

Since Iran and Saudi Arabia, which also supply quantitis of higher-quality oils to Canada, have announced similar price increases, it can be expected that the federal import subsidy will have to increase by about $1.05 a barrel, retroactive to Oct. 1.

This by itself would add some $100,000 a day to the federal oil deficit, since Canada is expected to continue to import about 100,000 barrels a day more than Canada exports.

At present, the federal import subsidy payment is $3.60 a barrel for all oil imported into Eastern Canada. The subsidy level is an average of the pre-Oct. 1 price of three types of imported crude, including Venezuelan crude.

Nine Months For Cocaine

Donald Gary Freeborn, 33, of Pascoe Road, Sooke, was sentenced Thursday to nine months in jail for possession of cocaine for the purpose of trafficking.

County court Judge Peter Millward also ordered an 18-month probation term.

Freeborn was stopped by police on the Patricia Bay Highway in Saanich Nov. 20, 1974, and two ounces of cocaine was found in a garbage bag on the floor by the front seat.

Prosecutor Mike Hutchison said two ounces represents 1,300 separate doses. He suggested this was a substantial quantity.

Defence counsel George Jones said a very heavy user of cocaine could use this in six days and the quantity involved was small.

LOS ANGELES — Lou Nova, who was knocked out by Joe Louis in a 1941 heavyweight title fight, withdrew as a candidate for U.S. president Thursday, saying his mother was afraid he would catch colds from wearing a bullet-proof vest.

Nova, who twice knocked out Max Baer, has identified himself in recent months as the presidential candidate of the Utopian party, which promises "war and peace and prosperity."

SYDNEY, Australia — A countrywide search for Valerie Anne Sullivan, 21, of Vancouver—in Australia on a hitchhiking holiday — started Thursday, police said.

The Canadian high commission in Canberra appealed to Australian police to find the girl whose parents want urgently to contact her, police added.

No other reason for the search was given.

OTTAWA — Hugh Keenleyside of Victoria has been appointed associate commissioner-genera lof Habitat '76, an international conference on lifestyles to be held in Vancouver next year.

The prime minister's office announced Thursday that Keenleyside will be responsible for co-ordinating various levels of B.C. government, major institutions and community groups who will be host to the United Nations conference.

OTTAWA — Paul Lucier, a one-time deckhand on a Yukon sternwheeler, Thursday was named as the first senator from northern Canada.

While delivering a parcel Sept. 11 to a hotel here, Pett saw two women in another car helping John Ryan, 70, of Lockport, Ill., victim of a heart attack. He applied mouth-to-mouth resuscitation while waiting for an ambulance.

He drove the women, Mrs. Ryan and her sister, Mary Powers, to the hospital where Ryan later died.

He then drove the two women 600 miles to Lockport, 30 miles south of Chicago, because the women were afraid of highway driving. Later he helped with funeral arrangements.

He returned to Oshawa and did not mention the incident. But a newspaper in the Lockport area described him as a "good Samaritan at his finest."

"It's not a heroic thing — just something that had to be done," Pett said Thursday.

Ex-Coma Victim Pleads For Karen

MORRISTOWN, N.J. (UPI) — Karen Ann Quinlan is aware of activity around her and should be kept alive, said a man who spent 28 days in a coma before returning to consciousness.

Guy Treadway, 21, accompanied by his attorney, tried without success Thursday to testify at the Morris County court house in the Quinlan case.

When he was refused permission, Treadway made his speech in the hallway, hoping someone would listen.

"Being in a coma was utopia. It was perfect. There was not one blotch. You don't want to come out of it. Karen has to be forced to come back. I think she is giving signs that she doesn't want to die. I don't think her flinching is coincidental," Treadway said.

"This is real important to me that they don't let her die. I don't even know her, but I feel real close to her. Any decision handed down could affect all persons in a coma," he said.

Treadway went into a coma after an automobile accident on Easter morning April 22, 1973. His head rammed the windshield, and he later was told doctors had given him up for dead.

Stabilization Program for Beef

OTTAWA (CP) — A beef stabilization program that guarantees producers a minimum price for slaughter cattle was announced by the agriculture department Thursday.

Effective between last Aug. 12 and the end of the year, it will assure producers of at least $43.94 a hundredweight for grades A, B and C cattle sold for slaughter.

If the average price drops below this level, the government will make up the difference.

"The support level ... takes into account the difficult circumstances of the farmer producing finished beef," the department said in a news release.

"Although they are not as critical as a year ago, feed costs, interest rates and feeder cattle prices have been lower and the market for top-grade cattle has held up pretty well.

Previous support programs ran from August to August, but the latest one switches programs to a calendar year basis.

"Mid-summer is not the best time to have the support year begin and end," the department said.

"There are difficulties in fore-casting feed costs and other inputs when we don't know, for example, the exact size of the forthcoming grain harvest."

Whelan Backs Boards

HAMILTON (CP) — Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan came to the defence of farm marketing boards again Thursday night and also took a poke at "powerful forces" that want the boards eliminated.

Their sole objective was total destruction of the farmers' right to have a say in the pricing of his produce.

"These people don't come right out and say, 'down with marketing boards, down with supply management or down with farmers' organizations,'" he said.

"Instead, they talk about the price of milk in Boston or the price of eggs in Kalamazoo. They make personal attacks on me."

Joyce Praises Team Effort

By D'ARCY KAVANAGH
Times Staff

She didn't visit the famed National Museum of Anthropology or beautiful Chapultepec Park, but Joyce Yakubowich certainly has no regrets about her two-week stay in Mexico City.

"It was really a great experience for me and the entire Canadian team," said Mrs. Yakubowich Thursday after returning to Victoria the previous night from her successful trip to the Pan-American Games.

"Our track team won 21 medals," she said, "and developed a real feeling as a team unit." At the last Games in 1971 in Cali, Colombia, Canada earned 16 medals.

No member of the national squad performed more brilliantly than the 22-year-old University of Victoria biology student. She won two gold medals, one bronze and set one games record. And all despite a case of lung congestion which still sends her into wheezing and coughing bouts.

"The altitude (Mexico City's elevation is 7,347 feet) didn't bother me during races," she said, "but I sure flet it after. I think the altitude was the main reason I got this lung congestion."

Mrs. Yakubowich plans a week's rest before returning to the rigors of training under personal coach Stan Gill. And if her apartment gets a little chilly during the next week, she can warm herself with memories from the games.

Her first race was the women's 400 metres last Sunday and she covered the distance in 51.62 seconds to capture the gold and set a games mark. So emotional was the win that she was still crying with joy an hour later at a press conference.

"I have always run the way I felt and I hoped that one day I would put it all together for one race. I did," she said.

Two days after her first win, she ran a blazing anchor leg to give Canada an upset victory over the U.S. in the 1,600-metre relay. The same day, she helped Canada take a bronze in the 400-metre relay.

"Right now Canada has the strongest relay teams, both men's and women's, it has ever had," she said.

Some Canadian athletes complained in Mexico City that the Pan-Am Games interrupted their training for the 1976 Olympics in Montreal.

"That's garbage," snarled Mrs. Yakubowich. "The more international experience, the better. It teaches us how to react in the kind of big meets we never see in Canada."

Despite her youth, the former Burnaby Central high school star has the experience to back what she says. She competed in the Olympics in 1972, the Pan-Am Games in 1971 and the Commonwealth Games in 1970, when she won a bronze medal in the women's 400-metre relay.

And this past summer she won the 200 metres at the Canadian nationals and was a member of a national team which toured Europe. That trip, she figures, helped her greatly in Mexico City because of the top European runners she faced.

For Mrs. Yakubowich, this season has been something of a comeback. She was out of track in 1973 and 1974 because "there was no national coach, no structure to Canadian track and too much politics."

Now she's happy with the national track scene. Gerard Mach of Poland has been appointed the Canadian coach and has helped give direction to the national program.

"Canada should have its best team ever for the 1976 Olympics," she said emphatically.

Others agree. Diane Clement of Richamond, president of the Canadian Track and Field Association, said in Mexico City she regards Canada's performance at the Pan-Am Games as a "real breakthrough."

And John Condon, press officer for the U.S. Track and Field Association, said American officials were impressed in Mexico City with some of the younger Canadians.

"I hear the officials talking and they have all gained a lot of respect for the Canadians here," he said. "They see it blossoming in the future and if they continue putting a lot of work into their programs, they will be a power before long."

Mrsy Yakubowich doesn't know what her chances will be for a medal at the Olympics. But if the Pan-Ams are a true indication, she will certainly be a top contender.

JOYCE YAKUBOWICH

CANADA MAY RECEIVE SOCCER-DEFAULT BILL

MEXICO CITY (CP) — Pan-American Games officials announced Thursday they are proposing that a bill be sent to the Canadian soccer team for the money lost as a result of Canada's withdrawel from its last two games.

Canada pulled out of soccer competition Tuesday because, it said, its roster had been so badly depleted by suspensions that it would be dangerous to the health of the players to compete in the final two games.

Five Canadians were suspended in the second and third games, a 2-0 loss to Argentina and an 8-0 loss to Mexico, after Canada had tied Jamaica 0-0 in its first game.

The Canadian view was that at least three of the suspensions were unfair.

Canada was to have played Costa Rica and Cuba this week and the organizing committee under Olympic rules, declared both games forfeited by 3-0 scores.

bill walker

If anything is certain about horse racing in the province, it's that Massie White should have the answer. After all, 65 years in the same sport should give him some kind of an edge.

Massie White is one of the men behind the scenes in racing and, although perhaps few of the punters on the grounds at any racing meeting know him personally or even to see, many of them believe in him explicitly. For Massie is the man who makes the consensus and sets the morning line for the daily program at the track.

He has been doing this since 1951 when he became operations manager of B.C. Turf and if you want to know his percentage of winners, it's a matter of fact that in the past four years at Exhibition Park he has had between 290 and 300 winners a season which works out to an average of about three a day.

Which isn't bad, and maybe was so good that a few years ago when the track gave away a prize for the best handicapper on the grounds, Massie was excluded.

But then, why shouldn't he have a built-in advantage? He started in 1911 by galloping horses at the old Minoru track, which was later Brighouse, and now is a shopping centre in Richmond.

That was in the A.M. In the afternoon he had a job in the mutuel department, printing the names of the horses on cardboard strips which went over the tops of the sellers' wickets. There weren't pari-mutuel machines and everything was done by hand then. The wagering stopped when the horses were one-eighth of a mile from the starting gate and the track calculators would walk in front of the sellers, count off the bets which were recorded by a "clicker" system, and post the approximate odds. When the Willows track was operating around that time, the "clicker" system was in use, Massie recalled.

It was at Colwood where the first mutuel machines operated. "That was the Australian tote, but it was only used at Colwood," he said.

As time moved along, Massie rode horses in such glamorous places as Lillooet, Ladner and way points, but never on a recognized track. He also owned horses and ran them. Then, for 22 years, he operated a race wire into Vancouver and Victoria points from points south.

"Oh, yes, I was in court a few times," he said. "I guess I had four court cases and beat them all, and 1951 was the last year I had the wire here."

It was in 1934 that Massie started "calling" races for the Daily Racing Form. (That's the type carried under the result of each race describing the actual running of the race, et al). "It's not that hard," he admitted, "once you get the knack. And sure, you get to remember the horses that had trouble or ran into a blind switch."

Massie was "trackman" for the longest time with The Daily Racing Form and "no, you don't do it all from memory when handicapping," he suggested. "You have to look back on them, for class, the owners, the public wagering, whether they were favorites — there is much to know about a horse."

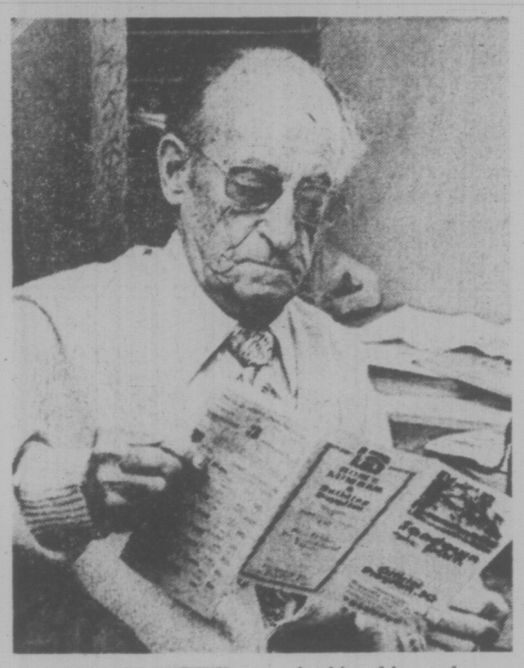
And, he wasn't always that great either. "There was one time," he recalled, "when I was working with The Racing Form. I went three days without having a winner and received a wire the next day, asking: "Have you been attending the races lately?"

Does he bet? Not in Vancouver or here, he said. But he has been known to make a wager or two at Phoenix or Portland or Santa Anita or wherever, when on vacation.

And where does he usually holiday? "In the Hawaiian Islands from mid-November to mid-February," he said. "That's a place where a person can really take a vacation if he knows how."

★ ★ ★

As it is now, however, a typical day in Massie's life at the track begins when he shows up at the printer's at 7 a.m. He is then phoned by the Racing secretary, in this case, Aubrey Davies, given the scratches, rider changes, weight changes for jockeys, any changes in owner's colors, etc.



MASSIE WHITE . . . checking his work

He then returns to the track where entries are being taken (starting about 6:30 a.m.) for the next day's card, arriving about 8:15. It is then his job to type the overnights, checking for last-race numbers, correct spelling, etc. After that, he starts over again on the program, making sure that all the information is correct for the next day's call. Of course, when new horses arrive at the tack, he must oversee compilation of that information, as well.

There are other incidentals to look after, too, in his six-day week. "I usually take Sundays off now," he said. "And maybe next year might be my last," he suggested.

"I intend to start" he said, "but if Jack (Diamond) goes to five days a week racing — he wants Sunday racing, then I'll have to make a final decision. It may be too much."

At 79 years of age, why not? And then, perhaps, announcer Jack Short will have more chance to cut down on Massie's lead in "calling" races.

"I figure I've called about 25,000 charts in my time," he recalled, "and not having done many for the past few years, that has given Jack the chance to close the gap," he laughed. "He's the only one close."

So the next time you pick up a racing program and see that little line in the corner "consensus", you'll know one thing for sure. The fellow who penned it has picked more winners than most.

And one tip for the punter. "Have fun," he said. After 65 years, he should know.

'Explosive' Bike Win

MEXICO CITY (CP) — Canada's swimmers, feeling the effects of a strenuous summer competition, picked up two silver medals and a bronze at the Pan-American Games Thursday and a bad-tempered cyclist won a gold medal for the United States.

The Americans, who had won only two cycling golds in six previous Games, picked up two in one day, in the 4,000-metre team pursuit and the 1,000-metre scratch sprint.

The eventual sprint champion, Steve Woznick of Ridgefield Park, N.J., threw a spectacular tantrum when the judges upheld a protest that he had obstructed his opponent in the semi-finals and ordered the race rerun.

The enraged American slashed the tires of his bicycle with a knife, hurled the bike into the stands, tore his sweatsuit in strips from his body and ran to the dressing room.

Then the judges reversed their ruling and Woznick, freshly clad and equipped, rode on to victory.

The Canadians were not the only weary swimmers in the Pan-Am pool. Games records were falling like autumn rain but few of the winners were coming close to their own best times or performances by other top swimmmers in international competition.

Bruce Robertson of Vancouver, who swam more than a second slower than his best time of the year as he finished third in the 100-metre butterfly, explained the swimmers' predicament:

"When you work hard over a long period of time your body starts to break down. Your muscles become fatigued. As you start tapering off, rest a lot more, not swim so much, your body rebuilds itself, you get stronger and you're able to go faster."

Cheryl Gibson of Edmonton, who won her fourth medal of the Games for a second-place finish in the women's 200 butterfly, also said she felt tired.

Camille Wright of the U.S. won the race in two minutes 18.7 seconds and Miss Gibson's time was 2:21.95. The American girl's time was nearly three seconds slower than her best this year and the 16-year-old Canadian has gone two seconds faster.

TIMES 'CAP DRAWS FIELD OF ELEVEN

The Times Handicap to be run at Sandown Park Saturday has drawn a field of 11 thoroughbreds with El Escorial the high weight of 122 and the probable favorite.

El Escorial was handy winner over Freedom Charger and Devon Sea at the same distance of 6½ furlongs on Wednesday.

Solar Drive and Le Farge have each drawn an impost of 120 while Quality's Image, Double Dev and No Help will carry 118 pounds. Others entered are Real Smooth, Our Diamond, Ship's Visitor, a winner at the meeting; Landscape and the surprising Cotten D, twice a winner here in two starts.

Medal Return Refused

Esquimalt has been ordered to return second-place silver medals won last summer in B.C. bantam girls lacrosse Association playdowns because an ineligible player was used.

B.C. minor lacrosse director Barry Menzies of Victoria declared Esquimalt ineligible after the team picked up Ruth Saunders of Juan de Fuca.

Menzies said B.C. rules permit a team to add only a goaltender for the playoffs and Esquimalt was given special permission to add goalie Shelly Huget of Juan de Fuca because there was not an Esquimalt team below the bantam level from which to draw.

But Miss Saunders, 11, is not a goalie and Esquimalt also picked her up from Juan de Fuca after receiving permission from B.C. girls' lacrosse commissioner Leona Manderson of Burnaby.

Menzies today said that John Peterson, a vice-president of the B.C. minor lacrosse who served as playoff director, also permitted Miss Saunders to play.

However, he added that the decision was contrary to rules "and we've got to put an end to this right away. We're not picking on Ruth or Esquimalt, we just want to fake sure the rules are followed."

Manderson and Esquimalt Minor Lacorsse Association past-president Darwin Robinson have decided to step down from their positions as a result of the incident.

The Esquimalt team has refused to return the silver medals and Menzies has ordered a new set to be awarded to Vancouver East for second place.

Cats Back on Square One

It wasn't possible on their nine-game, 12-day road trip across the Prairies, but Victoria Cougars are getting back to square one for their next Western Canada Hockey League engagement.

That means the forward lines will get back to looking like they did for the season's opener on Oct. 4, but not since then.

The major disruption to coach Pat Ginnell's alignments were injuries suffered by centre Al Hill and winger Rick Martin. Hill missed four games because of a charley-horse and his linemate has missed eight after a skate cut deeply into a leg.

Hill returned to the lineup last weekend and Martin skates back Saturday night when the Cougars play Saskatoon Blades at Memorial Arena.

Hill, Martin and winger Dan Lucas will be reunited for the first time since Oct. 8.

"There was some shuffling," Ginnell said Thursday. "Lucas played centre, left wing and right wing. And in order to get some balance, (Jim) Gustafson and (Jeff) McDill played with anyone and everyone."

McDill and Gustafson are reunited with Curt Fraser and, finally, Ginnell has two lines that resemble his opening-day formations.

With the return of Morley Anderson and a request from Craig Miller, Ginnell anticipates "some experimenting" with the seven players who can form two more lines.

Anderson started with the Cougars but went to Flin Flon Bombers to try and seal a transaction that brought McDill to Victoria. Flin Flon coach Mel Pearson dropped Anderson, so his rights reverted to Victoria.

No Flood of WFL Talent in CFL

Times News Services

There aren't any red carpets being rolled out by the Canadian Football League for the 380 players put out of work by the collapse of the World Football League.

Anthony Davis, the exciting running back for Southern California Sun, was to meet today with officials of Toronto Argonauts of the CFL but most Canadian teams apparently prefer to rely on the players they already have.

General manager Ken Preston of Saskatchewan Roughriders predicted Thursday there will be no rush to sign the players, who were put out of work when the league threw in the towel Wednesday.

"Unless some team is hurting at a certain spot or is out of the playoffs and trying to rebuild, I doubt if you will see that many of them brought up here," he said.

Cincinnati Reds were greeted by 25,000 fans in a downtown ceremony in which the World Series baseball trophy was presented. In contrast 15,000 celebrating fans the night before, Thursday's crowd was quiet and orderly. It was the Red's first World Series victory since 1940. Boston Red Sox were greetedy by 15,000 fans in ceremonies in Boston . . . One individual and six team records fell in the series. The individual mark — highest fielding average by an outfielder with the most series chances — was shared by Dwight Evans and Fred Lynn of Boston Red Sox and Reds' Cesar Germonimo, each with 24 chances and a 1.000 per cent average. Team marks were most pitchers used by both clubs in one game, 12 in the sixth contest; fewest saves by one club, none by Boston; fewest saves by both clubs, two best fielding average by one club, .993 by Cincinnati; most pitching appearances, one club, 30 in Cincinnati; most pitching appearances, both clubs, 52.

Those Who Go Prepared Will Come Back Again

It may seem a trifle trite, but there is an element of inescapable logic in the Boy Scout motto: "Be Prepared."

Adequate preparation, both from a knowledge and equipment standpoint, might have prevented a tragic death by exposure last weekend at Forbidden Plateau.

The two visitors from south of the border went hiking in the Plateau area, encountered three days of torrential rain and were unable to light a fire to dry their clothes.

Consequently, one died.

Anyone venturing out in the wilderness, whether afoot or in a vehicle, should be constantly aware of one important fact of life: Mother Nature seldom forgives mistakes.

The one chance you get could be your last and ignorance is no excuse.

Backpacking jaunts are especially susceptible to Nature's changing moods but vehicle travel far from civilization can be dangerous too, mainly because it provides a false sense of security.

In the event of a breakdown under adverse conditions, like an early snowfall, the situation could be extremely dicy and help would be further away.

Obtaining any of the necessities of life — food, water, shelter and heat —shouldn't present any problem on Vancouver Island. What isn't carried with you can be obtained in the field, providing you know where to look.

The most necessary item of all to carry along on any trek is a good supply of waterproof matches. Dry wood can be obtained anywhere, even during a downpour. The trick is to find it.

★ ★ ★

In logged-over areas, old stumps can be kicked or pried apart to extract pitch-soaked chunks of wood that catch fire better than dry cedar kindling. If you get a hot enough flame going, even the wettest wood will burn in time.

Elsewhere, look for windfall timber or old downed logs. Usually the underside is dry and many yield that same pitchy wood which has been a lifesaver for many outdoorsmen.

Protect the little dry wood you gather from getting wet and build the fire off the ground at first. A flat piece of dry bark is excellent for the purpose.

You can get by without a fire, however, if your clothing is adequate. A combination of down and woollen garments, with the former protected from getting wet, should maintain body heat at a proper level. Wool and some of the latest synthetic filling material for sleeping bags and jackets has the desirable quality of retaining its warmth even when wet.

Down, which is the best insulating material while dry, loses its loft and becomes useless when subjected to moisture.

This is only a sample of the knowledge you should acquire. Numerous books have been published on the subject of survival and some of the lessons they contain should be practised in the field before a critical situation arises.

Thus, the odds may be stacked a little more in your favor.

NIBBLES: Skiers throughout Vancouver Island should take note that the annual Winter Sports Fair is now underway at the P.N.E. Food Building in Vancouver . . . Three top professional hotdoggers (freestyle skiers) will be on hand to demonstrate their skills on a moving ramp and the latest gear will be on display . . . The fair is open until 10:30 tonight . . . Additional hours are from 1 to 10:30 p.m. Saturday and 1 to 6 p.m. Sunday.

Salmon fishing has been good in only a few areas around the Island this past week . . . Fair catches of smaller chinooks have been taken in Pedder Bay, Becher Bay, Saanich Inlet and off the Victoria waterfront . . . Coho fishing has been good in Pedder Bay and Deep Bay . . . A few larger chinooks have come in from Cowichan Bay and Alberni Inlet . . . For the freshwater angler, Elk Lake looks like a good spot to try a little bass fishing . . . Mildred Wolfenden landed a whopping 7.4-pounder there Wednesday morning on a Mudbug.

Flyers Come Back to Earth

By The Canadian Press

New York Islanders handed Philadelphia Flyers their first defeat of the season Thursday night and created a tie for first place between the two clubs in the Patrick Division of the National Hockey League.

The 3-0 loss to the Islanders was the first for the Flyers in a regular-season game since they dropped an 8-2 decision to Pittsburgh Penguins on March 8. In the interim, they put together 17 wins and two ties.

In Thursday's other game, Boston Bruins continued to flounder without defenceman Bobby Orr, dropping a 3-2 decision to Kansas City Scouts.

Last year the Islanders finished in a second-place tie with New York Rangers, 25 points behind the Flyers, who went on to win the Stanley Cup.

Resch (NY) 8 7 15—30
Attendance: 14,865.

Goaltender Glenn Resch, one of the Islanders' playoff heroes last spring, frustrated the Flyers Thursday night, blocking 30 shots and surviving a third period in which Philadelphia had a 15-8 edge in shots.

"We beat them at their own game," said Resch. "Forechecking, tight defence and picking up the man with the puck."

Bob Nystrom scored one goal and added an assist and Denis Potvin and J.P. Parise scored power-play goals in the third period to beat the Flyers.

It was the first time the Flyers have been shut out since last February.

At Boston, Guy Charron scored in the last minute to give the Scouts their win. Goaltender Dennis Herron's 35 saves helped keep Kansas City in the game.

Charron's goal came only minutes after Buster Harvey tied the score with a short backhand shot past Bruins' goalie Gil Gilbert.

BATES LAND LANDERS FOR WORLD TOURNEY

Victoria Bates, who captured the Canadian Senior "A" men's fastball championship without the benefit of a lefthanded pitcher, have landed the best in Canada for the World tournament in New Zealand in January.

Bates coach Joe Patterson learned Thursday the team has been given permission to pick up Pete Landers of Oshawa Tonys, Bates' opponents in last summer's national final.

At the same time, Canadian Amateur Softball Association president Bob Van Impe of Saskatoon gave Bates permission to pick up righthander Andy Konopacki of North Vancouver Roadhouse Vikings anl infielder Jim McMillan of Vancouver Magicians. Both played against Bates in the Pacific Coast League last season.

Indy Is Back On the Track

Times News Services

Indianapolis Racers' 4-0 victory over Houston Aeros Thursday night had Indianapolis coach Jack Demers ecstatic. It was easy to see why.

The win snapped a five-game World Hockey Association losing streak that cost Racers' previous coach, Gerry Moore, his job. The game was the second for Demers as coach.

In other WHA games, Cincinnati Stingers beat Edmonton Oilers 6-4 and Minnesota Fighting Saints tied San Diego Mariners 4-4 in overtime.

Bayi May Run Against Walker

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (AP) — The Tanzania Athletic Association has accepted an invitation to send long distance star Filbert Bayi to New Zealand in January for a series of four meets where he is expected to go against New Zealand ace John Walker. Walker clipped one-tenth of a second off Bayi's world record for the mile last august. Bayi still holds the 1500-metre mark.

American Leads

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — American John Toepel got out of bed before dawn, teed off at 7 a.m. in the Wills Masters golf tournament and shot a five-under-par 67 that stood up as best through the first day Thursday.

Toepel, 31, held a one-stroke lead over Australian Paul Hart, a part-time taxi driver, who offset two bogeys with an eagle on the last hole in scoring his 68.

Japanese Vet Leads Trevino By One Stroke

MIYOSHI, Japan (AP) — Japan's veteran pro Tadashi Kitta shot a six-under-par 66 Thursday and took a one-shot first-round lead over Lee Trevino of the United States and two others in the $143,333 Tokai Classic International open golf tournament.

Kitta scored seven birdies and one bogey on the 7065-yard, par-72 Miyoshi Country Club's west course in Aichi Prefecture, central Japan.

Trevino shared second spot with Japanese pros Shozo Miyamoto and Teruo Sugihara by shooting a five-under-par 67. Trevino had five birdies and no bogeys.

Canadians Hold Third

EDMONTON (CP) — An injury to the male partner in one of the world's top dance teams gave entrants in Skate Canada 75 an unexpected opportunity Thursday and two young Canadians took advantage of it.

Barbara Berezowski of Toronto and David Porter of Port Perry, Ont., ranked ninth in the world after the 1975 championships, grabbed third spot in the prescribed pattern section of the dance pairs event. They were close behind the leaders, Natalia Linichuk and Gennadi Karponosov of Russia, and the talented second-place pair, Matilde Ciccia and Lamberto Ceserani of Italy.

Ranked second to the Russians before this third annual Skate Canada event, Andras Sallay and Krisztina Regoczy of Hungary withdrew after the first of their three compulsory pattern dances when Sallay aggravated a back injury he received about three weeks ago in England.

Toller Cranston of Toronto, Canadian men's singles champ, and Ron Shaver of Cambridge, Ont., his closest rival in this country for several seasons, captured two of the top four spots in the compulsory figures bracket as Skate Canada opened to about 200 spectators.

The crowd grew to about 2,000 in the 16,000-seat Edmonton Coliseum for the evening performance, which was padded by a skating exhibition.

Cranston finished second behind little-known Igor Bobrin of Russia and Shaver was fourth, behind Laszlo Vajda of Hungary.

Some Canadians were concerned by the performances of the women's contingent, Susan MacDonald of Vancouver, Kim Alletson of Ottawa and Camille Rebus of Edmonton. They finished fifth, sixth, and eighth, respectively, in the compulsories.

Alletson was considered likely to improve her position. MacDonald and Rebus were invited to gain international experience.

Crowd Mark Anticipated

TORONTO (CP) — Completion of 8900 additional seats in the lower section of stands in the west end zone at CNE Stadium has brought stadium capacity to 51,200.

A spokesman for Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League said the expansion should assure the Argos of a league record crowd for Saturday's game against Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

The spokesman said 39,000 advance tickets had been sold by late Wednesday.

Field Hockey Playdowns Under Way

The Vancouver Island high school girls' field hockey playoffs began today at Windsor Park following the last game Thursday in the Greater Victoria League.

St. Margaret's broke a seventh-place tie with Reynolds by edging visiting Esquimalt 1-0 but failed by two points to make the Island playoffs.

Oak Bay finished on top followed by Mt. Douglas, Norfolk House, Spectrum, Vic High and Dunsmuir, all of whom made the playoffs.

St. Margaret's win, the school's fourth of the season, came on a goal by Jean Boschman and matched the team's record last season.

On Wednesday, Parkland and Esquimalt played to a scoreless tie.

Vees Switch Coaches

PENTICTON, (CP) — Penticton Vees have appointed Joe Beggs of Summerland to replace Nick Iannone as coach of the British Columbia Junior Hockey League club.

The Vees have three victories in their first eight starts of the season.

The Royal Victoria Yacht Club has celebrated Women's International Year by electing its first female commodore.

Jennifer Charlesworth is the first junior commodore the club has ever had. This presents a major breakthrough in a club where adult female members are still denied full voting privileges.

Running the juniors' program this year with Jennifer will be Alison Roots, secretay and treasurer, and fleet captain Ian Pickles.

Jennifer's first major event was the organization of the annual Gladwell Trophy regatta for juniors, held at the club Saturday and Sunday with some of the 11 races being sailed under blustery conditions that kept crews of even the larger keel boats in the area on their toes.

The RVYC juniors created another first by handling the regatta without adult help, except for moral support from the club's junior advisor, Ian Scott. This was quite a feat, involving 48 competitors, four two-man crews being in each team of the six participating clubs.

For the first time in Gladwell competition, spinnakers were flown, Flying Juniors being the boats used.

RVYC won the hotly-contested event. Next came Hollyburn Sailing Club, followed by Kitsilano Yacht Club, Royal Vancouver Yacht Club and, tied for fifth spot, West Vancouver Yacht Club and Corinthian Yacht Club of Seattle. On the winning team were Tony Rose, Nick Thornton, Tim Roots, Ross Nunan, Andrew Burton, Mike Angus, Rick Townshend and Jennifer.

★ ★ ★

The Lester B. Pearson College of the Pacific hosted another major event for juniors on the weekend with 19 youths competing in the eight-race series for the provincial single-handed championships for 16 years-and-under.

Again, some of the lighter skippers had their work cut out to race in Sunday's wind that peaked at 30 knots. The evchampionships, organized by the B.C. Sailing Association for the Canadian Yachting Association, were won by Jeff McBride, a RVYC sailor who was racing under the colors of the Brentwood College for this event. Ian Pickles of RVYC was second and Mike Cannon of the Salt Spring Island Sailing Club, third.

★ ★ ★

The Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association, hosted the 15 race-series for the international CYA team Transom Trophy on the weekend, which was won by the University of Victoria. Next came RVYC, followed by KYC, the University of British Columbia, CFSA Comox and the host squadron.

There'll be the usual keel boat and dinghy racing on Sunday for CFSA sailors.

★ ★ ★

Members of the Elk Lake Sailing Association will gather at 8 p.m. in CFSA's Munro Head clubhouse on Thursday for ELSA's annual general meeting. The club meets at Eagles Beach on Elk Lake every Sunday for dinghy sailing from 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. If you have a dinghy and would like to learn more about sailing and racing tactics, joining ELSA is a good way to start.

★ ★ ★

Keel boats turned out in good numbers for the 13½ mile Lipton Cup race, organized by RVYC on Sunday.

Greg Oliver's Distant Drummer was the first boat among those racing under the International Offshore Rule. After her came Tom Loney's Goodbye, Al Nelson's Lucifer, Jan Huibers' new Ranger 29 Sea Spell, George Johnstone's Tarquin III, Steve Merriman's Vandal II, Fred Gardiner's Tringa, Murray Farmer's Seeker, Hugh Bacon and Rod Andrews' Encounter and John Cicery's Valare.

Max Young's Spice was the winning Pacific Handicap Racing Fleet boat. She edged out Ralph Higgins' Sundowner, Dick Readshaw's Massilia II, John Ellis's Isis, Jan Olsen's Discretion, Mike Weir's Filey Brigg, Bob Van Den Driessche's Noosa, J. Robinson's Aratei and G. Brooks' Maple Sugar.

Several of the boats that took part will be out again racing this Sunday, this time in round-the-buoy events of the Turkey Head Sailing Association off Oak Bay Marina.

There'll be two races, one at 10 a.m. and the other, 1:30 p.m. Dinghy sailors of RVYC will have series racing in Cadboro Bay on Saturday, beginning at 1:30 p.m.

★ ★ ★

The Canoe Bay Sailing Club has another six-miler slated for Saturday in waters off Sidney. Start time is 1 p.m.

Walt Dickinson's Muirgen was the first among more than 40 boats that took part in Sunday's six-mile. After her came Cam Thomson's Cal-Lorri, Alan Dickinson's Viking, John Barker's Interlude, Dayl Foster's Tzonqua, John Graeme's recently refurbished six-metre Llanoria, Jack Patterson's No No, G. McNaughton's Amber Green, R. Baldwin's Summersalt and Don Parker's Irides.

The club's last season's winners will be out in force when CBSC holds its annual prizegiving at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the Sidney Hotel.

Steven's Clipped By Independents

A hot second-half burst helped Independents rally for an 80-76 Senior Men's "B" Basketball League victory at Spectrum School Thursday.

Trailing 59-53, Independents out-scored Steven's Interiors 15-4 to charge from behind.

Bob Scott sparked the winners by scoring 10 of his 11 points in the second half. Leon Mitchell was Independents' high man with 14 but the game standout was Jim Cunningham of Stevens.

Seven Carry the Load As Boxers Win Ninth

London Boxing Club ran its unbeaten streak to nine games in the South Island Big Six Hockey League Thursday night at Juan de Fuca Area.

The Boxers dealt James Bay Canadians a 7-1 defeat as seven players shared in the scoring. Graham Brown, Bob Boyd, Rugs Pritchard, Bob Martin, Al McLaren, Wally Popoff and Ron Poole counted for the winners while Perry Head was the James Bay marksman.

Food Company Profits 'Minor' Factor In Soaring Costs of Last Year: Beryl

OTTAWA (CP) — The food prices review board has concluded that food company profits did not make a significant contribution to increased food prices in 1974 and the first half of 1975.

The board, which technically ceased to exist after the new anti-inflation tribunal was established last week, released the results today of a study of 78 major food processors and distributors.

In it, board chairman Beryl Plumptre said their profits had a "relatively minor" effect on higher food prices.

"This does not mean that changes in food company profits were not a contributing factor behind rising food prices. They were, but to a relatively minor degree in relation to the upward push on prices from various costs."

The report says that controls on profits, by themselves, would not have had a major impact on food prices.

In 1974, Canadian food processing companies had an average after-tax profit of 2.06 cents per dollar, down from 2.61 cents in 1973. The distributing companies showed after-tax profits of 1.02 cents per dollar, up from 0.85 cents in the preceding year.

Mrs. Plumptre told a news conference today that "viewing recent food company profitability in Canada relative to earlier years, relative to companies elsewhere in the economy and relative to the earnings available from fixed return financial investments, we conclude that the Canadian food companies, as a group, were not earning excessive profits through 1974 and 1975.

The food processing companies provided shareholders with an average 13.6-per-cent return in 1974, down from 14.1 per cent in 1973. This, the report says, compares with an average return of 16.1 per cent in the manufacturing industry generally.

The food distributing companies provided shareholders with an average return of 11.2 per cent in 1974, up from 9.2 per cent in the preceding year "but still less than the average 13.3 per cent rate earned by corporations in the merchandising sector of the economy as a whole," the study said.

Mrs. Plumptre said these returns can be compared with a return on risk-free bonds of about 10.5 per cent.

The report says that by far the biggest factor in higher food prices is the higher cost of raw materials.

"The higher cost of merchandise acquired by the food distributors traces back primarily to the food processors, and to some degree directly to the farm gate and to imports," Mrs. Plumptre said.

"For the food processors, one can go through a similar analysis of costs . . . there, we see that the pass-through of raw material costs accounted for 72 per cent of the increase in processor sales. The remainder was accounted for by higher payrolls and by other expenses."

Food distributors in 1974 increased the value of their sales by 19 per cent or more than $1.3 billion—most of this due to higher prices.

The report says that more than 80 per cent of the increase was due to product costs. Nine per cent was related to higher wages and four per cent was related to other increased expenses.

"As a consequence of the cost-pass-through process in the food industry, last year's rise in food prices would have been only slightly less if controls on wage increases and on profit margins had been in effect."

TROOPS SENT IN, BEIRUT CALMED

Times News Services

BEIRUT — Small units of army troops moved into strategic parts of Beirut today for the first time in Lebanon's current civil strife to bolster hard-pressed security forces trying to set up buffer zones between warring militiamen.

The intervention reduced street fighting, but the Lebanese government radio said Christian and Moslem gunmen were still kidnapping motorists on several highways despite the presence of tanks and security checkpoints.

Police reported 11 persons killed during the night before troops moved in said they found another nine bodies in battle zones that had become quiet.

Fires destroyed five furniture, aluminum and plastics factories in the eastern suburbs, with damage estimated at more than $10 million.

U.S. Embassy officials, meanwhile, said they had no word on two Americans seized Wednesday in a moslem-Palestinian stronghold.

Sister City Claimed Luxury

The sister city program is a luxury Victoria can no longer afford, Ald. Sam Bawlf said Thursday when confronted with a request that council pay about $305 for a trip to Palm Springs, Calif.

The request came from Doug Abbott, co-ordinator of the Victoria-Palm Springs sister city program. Abbott said in a letter that he was to speak to two service clubs in Palm Springs in November and the money was mainly to cover return air fare.

The committee declined the request for funds and committee chairman Bawlf said a person who represents other citizens in a program should be capable of paying his own way.

Abbott today refused to say whether or not he would make the trip without council funds.

Spanish 'Ready' To Quit Sahara

MARRAKECH, Morocco (AP) — Moroccan sources say Spain has agreed tentatively to turn over the disputed Spanish Sahara to Morocco, and Morocco in turn will cede part of the territory to Mauritania.

No official confirmation of the report was immediately available.

There was also no immediate reaction from Algeria, which opposes the claims of Morocco and Mauritania and backed a Spanish proposal for a self-determination referendum.

The Albertans, who defeated Morocco in one desert war over another part of the Sahara, are reported to have about 3,000 troops along Algeria's 18-mile frontier with the Spanish Sahara.

The sources said the tentative agreement was worked out this week by King Hassan II and Jose Soliz Ruiz, a special envoy from Madrid, and that Foreign Minister Ahmed Laraki would go to Madrid today or Saturday to complete the agreement for transfer of sovereignty.

However, the negotiations may be delayed because of Generalissimo Francisco Franco's failing health and moves to replace him as the Spanish chief of state, the sources said.

The agreement will not halt King Hassan's "march of conquest" into the territory, the sources said. However, only a "sympolic contingent" from the 350,000 unarmed civilian marchers will go all the way to El Aaiun, the capital of the Spanish Sahara.

'A Warm-Up Program For U.S.

Canadian Press

An education campaign will begin in the United States next spring to acquaint Americans with Canada's recently-introduced metric system.

Gene Gosh, director of the British Columbia Metric Conversion Committee, said Thursday the campaign will be conducted through U.S. tourist agencies to make sure Americans realize the difference between Fahrenheit and Celsius temperature readings.

His announcement followed an earlier statement from B.C. Motel, Resort and Trailer Park Association that said one of the reasons B.C.'s tourist trade dropped 11 per cent last summer was because Americans heard about temperature readings 25 degrees in B.C. and concluded it was too cold for a holiday in the province.

Gosh said this misunderstanding might have had a detrimental effect on some potential U.S. tourists, but the education program should solve the problem by next summer.

Transfer Completed At Parksville

PARKSVILLE — Canadian Pacific Railway has completed its trasfer facility for sulphuric acid in Parksville.

But controvesy still clouds the project.

The transfer facility, which caused a fuss in Courtenay in the past year, and which was turned down by Nanaimo only recently, was under construction before residents of Parksville were aware of it — and before the Nanaimo Region Board had issued a building permit.

One of the most controversial aspects of the facility is its proximity to the village's water supply. The Parksville springs are about 1,000 feet from the tower and the underground streams that feed the springs flow directly beneath the facility.

WORKERS BACK

MONTREAL (CP) — Construction at the 1976 Summer Olympic Games site resumed today after workers decided to obey a Quebec Superior Court injunction ordering them to end an illegal walkout which halted work on the mammoth project since Monday.

About 3,000 workers walked off the job to protest the use of a police blacklist of "undesirable" workers who are banned from the site.

The walkout halted all work on the Veledrome, swimming pool and the 70,000-seat main stadium.

A Quebec Federation of Labor spokesman said early today the injunction had still not been delivered. Nonetheless, he said, the union was asking the workers to return to work.

Sundance Would Get A-Plus—If It Gave Grades

By KIT COLLINS
Times Staff

The traditional system of grading student progress with an A, B, C, or D, just doesn't apply to the 116 students at Sundance less-structured school, principal George Olsson said today.

"The success of each child attending the school is individually defined," said Olsson.

"We put that in our advertisements when the school started up and we wouldn't be keeping our commitment if it wasn't so."

Olsson was commenting on the Greater Victoria school board's evaluation of the alternative school during its first three years and he said he is pleased with it because "it was a real attempt to be fair."

The team, headed by Glenn Wall, board assistant superintendent in charge of instruction, said the school met objectives, but the team said inadequate records on students makes it difficult to judge student progress.

Stated goal at the school's inception three years ago was the following: Individual evaluation of progress is based on individualized criteria agreed to by the child, the parent and the teacher. So all three know exactly where they stand even if the onlooker is confused.

"I know what the 23 kids in my family (student grouping) are learning," said Olsson, "and I'm extremely aware of what they don't know, what they do know and what they need to know.

"Sundance shouldn't be judged in light of what a conventional school should be," he said.

An alternative school is something different, he said. It can't be compared with the regular system because the comparison would do either one or the other a disservice.

"We'd be pulling a massive con-job if we accepted students from as far away as the end of 10-Mile Point and they got the same thing as they could get in the regular school system."

Eventually, said Olsson, we will come to some sort of checklisting system, but it has to evolve.

"We're extremely afraid that one child would be compared to another in a grading system, when one of the basic goals of the school is to treat kids as equals."

High point in the report, as far as Olsson is concerned, was the conclusion that Sundance is significantly different from alternative schools . . . "Because it means Sundance has succeeded. We were instructed by the board to be different, and it means we're doing what we were supposed to have been doing."

School parent Dan Blower agrees with the report that there could be a little more emphasis on progress reports.

Students don't necessarily have to be all pegged on the same scale, but parents could get some type of report on their child as an individual.

It would assist parents who aren't actively involved with the school and "give just a little more background for a child who is transferring to a structured system," Blower said.

Another parent, Penny Perry, however said she's not at all unhappy with the system as it is now.

She feels the evaluation team pointed out a lack of record-keeping because "traditionally that's how it's used to judging student progress."

Parents consult with the teacher and child and it's a satisfactory verbal contract, she said.

Besides, there seems to be no problem in the case of a student who transfers to the regular system.

One child transferred to the regular system in September, "and she's on top of it all. She had no problem making the transition, and she's in the top three of her class without the benefit of tests or records," said Mrs. Perry.

Record Blood Donor Turnout

Red Cross spokesman Jerry Savage said today that credit goes to volunteers from the Provincial Ambulance Service, who canvassed apartments before this week's blood drive and who promoted the clinic with an ambulance display in the mall.

He also paid tribute to members of the Victoria Real Estate Board whose "great personal effort" boosted the clinic Thursday.

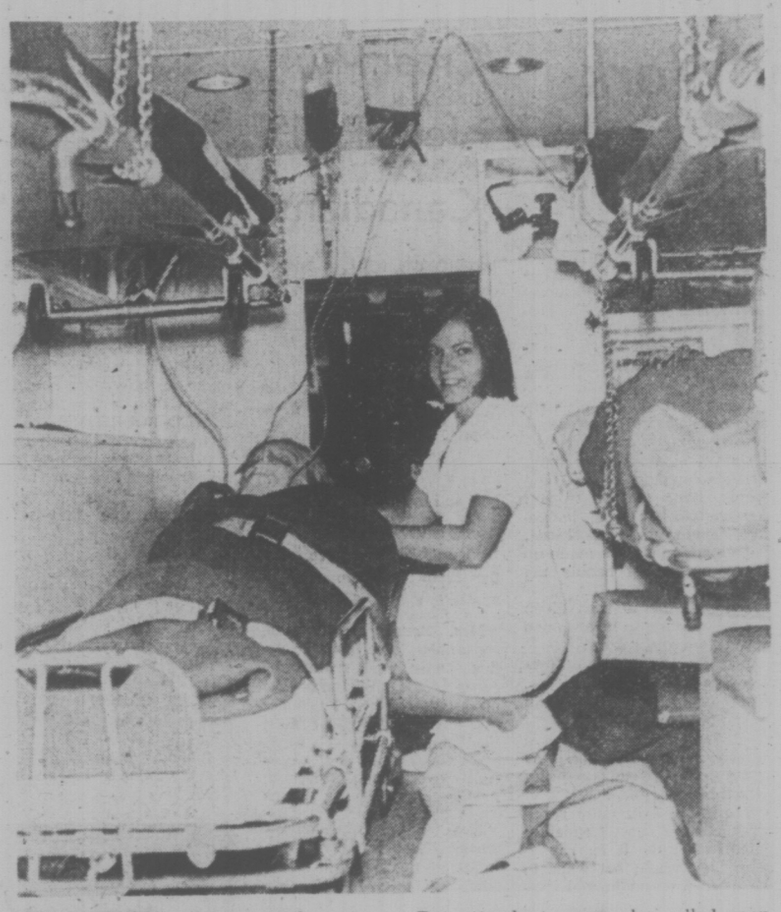
Savage said Thursday's turnout brings the total of donors this month to 1,724 and virtually assures that for the first time in many years donors in Greater Victoria will match the amount of blood used by the communitys' hospitals this year.

Donors total 10,691 so far this year and Savage has calculated local hospitals will use 12,000 units of blood by the year-end.

The last of this month's clinics will be held at the Royal Jubilee Hospital nurses' residence today, from 9:30 a.m. to noon and 1:15 p.m. to 4:30 p.m.



VOLUNTEERS who manned prototype ambulance of the Provincial Ambulance Service to promote blood clinic at Hillside Mall Thursday used mannequin as display patient, tended here by Helen Wood of the Red Cross. But attendants were also called upon to work in earnest when woman suffered apparent heart attack just outside mall and was treated before being taken to Royal Jubilee Hospital. Truckers' Hackles Up Over Ferries Edict

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

A stick-to-the-rules edict of the B.C. Ferries system is raising the hackles of trucking companies, using the Swartz Bay-Tsawwassen ferry runs.

Tempers have flared at the Swartz Bay terminal as truck drivers are forced to wait several hours before boarding ferries.

On Thursday, some of them stormed into the terminal office to voice their objections, and "fisticuff situations" developed between drivers and terminal workers.

A B.C. Ferries spokesman explained today that the cause of the problem is an order put into effect on Monday.

"We've always had a policy on commercial traffic and vehicles over six feet six inches in height," the official explained. "If they are in the terminal 30 minutes before a scheduled sailing they have a loading priority on up to one third of a ferry's capacity — 1,000 feet of deck space.

"But in the past some of our boys have been a little generous. Now, with the winter schedule, we have given orders that the rules must be applied."

He explained that a trucker could miss several sailings if he arrived before the 30-minute deadline but there was overheight traffic ahead of him that would fill two or more sailings, based on the one-third of deck space ruling.

Compounding the problem at this time is the racing season at Sandown and hunters.

"We're trying to reduce the Sandown traffic by plugging that people use buses," he said. "But there have been hundreds using cars.

"Also, there's relatively good hunting and we've had a hell of a lot of hunters (using the ferries), most of them using campers."

Some of the congestion, he said, will be eased by the additional two sailings that will be put on during the mornings, an 8 a.m. one from Tsawwassen and a 10 a.m. run from Swartz Bay.

He admitted the ferry system is receiving "a lot of flack" from trucking companies but suggested that these companies should consider alternative means of transporting goods between the mainland and Vancouver Island.

"We've been asking people to look at the CP Rail service which has the Carrier Princess running from Swartz Bay to downtown Vancouver," he said, "People should take a careful look at all transportation and use the best possible means."

Based on a U.S. survey, he added, it has been proven that it costs 24 cents a mile for highway traffic, compared to the 20 cents a mile if ferries are used.

A provincial government source said the additional sailings will be monitored and the sailings withdrawn if and when it appeared the traffic does not warrant them. Basis for the original 1975 winter schedule, excluding the two new runs, was 1974 traffic figures.

Gov't Criticizes Capital Region Hospital Site

The provincial government is "not completely happy" with the new hospital site chosen by the Capital region, associate deputy health minister John Glenwright said Thursday.

"We're not as encouraged about the site as they are," Glenwright said.

The site, at the corner of MacKenzie Avenue and Pat Bay Highway, has a $2.5 million price tag on it, said Glenwright, and the government is concerned about the high cost.

The Regional Hospital and Health Planning Commission recommended the site two months ago and said it meets all the requirements for location.

Glenwright said the government is looking at two alternative sites but would not say where they were.

Earlier this week, regional administrator John Clark said the province is holding up development of the new hospital by its tardiness in approving the site.

The proposed hospital will have at least 400 beds and will be 60 per cent financed by the government. It is intended to serve Saanich and the western communities of Colwood, Langford and Metchosin.

Meanwhile, Health Minister Dennis Cocke said Thursday he has deferred a decision on a new hospital for northern Vancouver Island pending clarification of population trends.

A hospital has been proposed for the Regional District of Mount Waddington with Port Hardy and Port McNeill as the most central locations.

While waiting for the population trends to emerge, Cocke said, he would authorize improvements for the existing Port Hardy hospital and the building of a diagnostic treatment centre at Port McNeill.

Public Backs Us: Police

Victoria policemen have the general support of the community in their dispute with the city over wages, because citizens are concerned that they receive adequate protection and law enforcement, an arbitration hearing was told this morning.

Sgt. Patrick Braiden, president of the Victoria Policemen's Union, said during the protracted argument with city hall over the union's wage demands, he has received many letters and calls for support from the public.

"People are very concerned about adequate policing," he told arbitrator Guy Barclay on the second day of the hearing at Empress Hotel.

"One lady phoned me up and said 'I don't care what it costs, but I do want to see a policeman walking down Douglas Street again; I haven't seen one for years'."

Braiden earlier drew attention to the thin cover of police protection necessitated by manpower shortage which leaves the city exposed from time to time, affecting efficiency and morale.

Braiden claimed the public is "not the least bit hesitant" to pay higher wages to its police officers for better policing. Citizens realized that to do otherwise would be a false economy.

He and Dermod Owen-Flood, counsel for the police union, pointed out that the Victoria Chamber of Commerce and the Downtown Business Association have come out in support of policemen and feel they should be paid at least as much as their Saanich counterparts.

Vancouver lawyer Jack Giles, who is representing the city, said: "We won't dispute the proposition that politicians like to get re-elected. To a large extent that governs the policies which they formulate."

Retorted Owen-Flood: "That is precisely what we are trying to tell you."

The police union is seeking parity with Saanich, where under a recent settlement a first class constable with three years' service receives $16,200 annual salary. Giles, in cross-examining Braiden, claimed the Saanich settlement itself was "grossly, outrageously irresponsible," because in one step it placed Saanich policemen on a par with police in large metropolitan areas like Vancouver, Toronto, Montreal and Hamilton.

(It was agreed that Vancouver leads the field with a $16,512 salary for a first-class constable, followed by Hamilton $16,396; Montreal $16,273, and Toronto $16,260.)

Giles asked whether policemen in those centres would not have "every reason to be dissatisfied" with the fact that they are receiving amounts substantially the same as officers in largely rural Saanich, but Braiden replied the chief factor to consider is the work load — "the amount of work each man has to do in each community. It should be equal work for equal pay."

Saanich last year hired 15 additional policemen.

In testimony which occupied the entire first day of the hearing, Thursday, Braiden referred point by point to the lengthy list of proposals first submitted to the city 10 months ago as the basis for negotiations.

He claimed the police department suffers from a "chronic shortage" of staff, and has done for several years, a situation which affects both the efficiency of the force and the morale of police officers.

This manpower deficiency — an average of 7.6 men for the past five years — creates an unnecessary amount of overtime, he said.

But although, in theory at least, the men have the option of taking overtime in cash or time off in lieu, "we are usually paid off rather than being given the opportunity to have time off," because there is simply too much work for too few men.

"It's not unusual to have one (patrol) car covering the whole city of Victoria at one time," Braiden said. "These are the things that seem to affect morale."

Too few traffic offenders are apprehended because the officers are occupied with more important taks, he told the arbitrator.

It is becoming increasingly difficult for city policemen to look forward to their two days off each week, because they know they are "subject to recall" to testify at court cases.

FUEL TRUCK FLIPS OVER

Hot Line Humming With Price Beefs

The Victoria anti-inflation hotline has received more than 20 complaints of price increases during the past four days — with hikes ranging from seven per cent to almost 100 per cent.

All prices have been frozen since Oct. 13, except to pass along cost increases.

One Victoria resident phoned the Revenue Canada hotline to report his home insurance premium had risen about 100 per cent.

At the other end of the scale, a Victorian complained about a seven per cent increase in the price of walnuts in the shell.

All complaints are being forwarded to Ottawa for action by the anti-inflation board.

One of the first complaints was a protest against an increase in the price of coal since Thanksgiving Day. A Victoria coal merchant later phoned in to explain that he was simply passing along an increase due to higher freight rates. He then lodged a formal complaint about the freight rate increase.

The complaint department can be reached by phoning 388-3551 Monday to Friday between 8:15 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. A toll-free number, Zenith 0-4000, is available for Vancouver Island residents phoning Victoria.

Revenue Canada spokesman Robert Chapman said callers should be prepared to identify themselves and the company they are complaining about. The caller's name will be kept confidential.

"It is helpful if the caller knows what the price was before Thanksgiving Day," Chapman said.

"One caller asked a merchant the reason for the price increase, and this information was very helpful."

The price at issue involved a popular cough medicine that had risen to about $5 a bottle from $3. The druggist said the increase was due to an increase in the price of codeine. The caller doubted that the 66 per cent increase was justified because codeine made up only about one per cent of all the ingredients in the medicine. The information has been passed along to Ottawa.

Other complaints received this week include:

The price of tropical plants up 100 per cent since May.

Prescription ointment up nine per cent since September.

Propane gas up 15 per cent.

Flour up 10 per cent.

There were three separate complaints about beer parlor price increases to 40 cents a glass from 35 cents.

Grape juice up 30 per cent.

One brand of soap up 40 per cent.

There were three separate complaints about bread price increases of about three cents a loaf.

Bacon prices were reported to be up 10 per cent. Food prices can rise if they reflect higher prices paid to producers.

Somebody Up There Must Be Laughing

ONE DAY WHEN SUMmer was on the land, I looked up at our newly-repaired roof and offered one of those fathead predictions that set the gods snickering.

"There," I said. "We shouldn't have any more trouble with that!"

Summer passed. The rainy season arrived. This morning I sat down to my typewriter and fed it a wad of paper.

My first two-fingered assault on the keys was answered by a splash. I peered up at the ceiling and saw a pie-sized wet patch.

My point isn't that a rain-laden southeaster should dislodge a shingle. Elderly roofs can and do leak. But it occured to me while mopping up my flooded machine that something more than coincidence had positioned the leak where it would cause maximum confusion. Someone up there must be laughing.

As an optimist, I like to believe that the wind is tempered to the shorn lamb.

Still, even an optimist can have his moments of pessimism, and in mine I occasionally become aware of a phenomenon that asserts itself when man least expects it.

Call it the laughter of the gods.

A friend of mine heard it distinctly in the lobby of a crowded hotel where he'd just learned that his reservation wasn't effective until later that week. He'd laid out his trip schedule with meticulous care from a pocketbook calendar a year outdated.

Another friend must have caught at least a chuckle when he gazed at the 64-pound tyee salmon landed by the neophyte whom he'd coached in the art of mooching.

"I did just what you told me," said the lucky fisherman as he displayed his catch. "Put my boat in at Ken Forde's ramp, ran out past the edge of the kelp, and bumped a Deadly Dick off the bottom. I reeled it up a couple of feet like you said, and Wham!"

Then he added the stinger. "Too bad you had to work in your garden."

The fellow who elected to work in his garden was sure in his private mind that the fishing wouldn't be worth a hoot.

The driver who boasts that his car hasn't demanded so much as a new fuel pump in 90,000 miles is asking for the expensive lunkity-klunk of a broken connecting rod.

This isn't to suggest that a proper spirit of humility is insurance against unwelcome attention from the powers that sit in judgment on our affairs.

I can remember no man less inclined to court the divine laughter than a surveyor whose attitude toward the black bears of our Island woods was nothing if not respectful.

"No point in crowding your luck," he counselled me as we began a wide detour around a valley elbow where we'd spotted a half-pint blackie foraging for grubs.

This prudent observation delivered, he barged his way through an ocean spray clump that harbored a hornet's nest. He wound up plastering his stings with wet mud in a creekbed.

It's possible, of course, that the laughter of the gods may sometimes be of benevolent intent.

The supposedly trouble-proof car that popped a rod was revealed by garage diagnosis to be dangerously loose in the steering assembly.

It's even possible that the flooding of my typewriter, which is still a trifle damp, may be more than a piece of Olympian whimsy.

Could someone up there be trying to tell me something?

Q. What was the original estimated cost of the 1976 Olympics? How much have we gone over the estimated cost? Did Munich lose money with their Olympics, and if so how much? — L.D. and E.F.

A. Our file on this subject has so many different figures it looks like a gymnasium. But the original 1976 construction estimate appears to have been $250 million plus $60 million for administration on revenue of $310 millions. The budget has since risen to $653 million, then $714 million, including construction costs of $580 million and administration of $73 million on revenue of $450 million. That would leave a deficit of $264 million, but this figure has since been revised to $320 million. A year frow now, when the games are over, there may be a more accurate accounting. Munich games are variously reported to have cost $600 million — $1 billion with a deficit of $262 million.

Crock Cabbage for Sauerkraut

THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS

Making sauerkraut is not difficult if you wait until cool fall weather to tackle the job. All you need is an earthenware crock and a cabbage slicer. I bought both in an antique shop for $8.

Slice up your cabbage heads by sliding them over the blade (or blades) of the "krautcutter." Then salt the shredded mass at the rate of 3½ tablespoons of seasoning to five pounds of kraut.

Work up five pounds of cabbage at a time, mix in salt and place the kraut in a good-sized farm crock. Keep mashing the kraut down in the container with a potato masher or similar tool (I use a baseball bat) and fill the crock to within five inches of its top. By then, juice should cover th kraut when you press it down hard with the potato masher, bat or whatever.

Cover the mass with several thicknesses of a clean cloth and top that with a plate that fits the circumference of the crock.

Weight the plate down with a rock or other heavy object (a jar of water will do) to keep the kraut down under the juice.

A scum forms on the surface of the kraut juice as the cabbage ferments. Remove the deposit or if — as usually happens — the cloth soaks it up, change the fabric covering often.

When the weather's hot, the kraut may spoil. (I like a temperature of about 65 F best for kraut making, though some prefer 70.)

In about a month, the kraut will stop fermenting. You'll know it because the bubbles will stop coming up in the juice anymore . . . even when you tap the crock.

You can leave the sauerkraut right in the crock, if you place it where the temperature remains no higher than 55 degrees and if you can eat it all up before the end of winter. Otherwise, you should can the sauerkraut following the canning instructions in any cookbook.

Look-Busy Orders Irk Office Workers

DEAR ABBY: Our problem is probably a common one, but I haven't yet seen a solution to it in your column, so I thought I'd write.

There are four girls in our office. (It's an insurance agency.) At times we are very busy, but there are times when there is absolutely nothing to do.

In the past, when we had nothing else to do, we just sat around and talked, did needlework or read magazines — anything to keep from pulling our hair out from sheer boredom.

Now our bosses have instructed us to "look" busy with "insurance business," even though we aren't. In other words, we have to be typing something — even if it's personal correspondence. We can't read books or magazines, do needlepoint or manicure our nails.

I know this doesn't make one bit of sense, but those are our orders. Do you have any suggestions about how we can make our bosses see how ridiculous their orders are? — BORED FOURSOME

DEAR BORED: Better follow instructions or else your bosses might wise up to the probable fact that they've got more help than they really need.

DEAR ABBY: Add this one to your list of how a husband can tell if his wife is fooling around: if she suddenly starts to get pedicures and shaves her legs every day. — CAUGHT ON

DEAR CAUGHT ON: And here's another tip for the wives on how to tell if hubby is fooling around: if he starts shaving twice a day and suddenly makes constant use of those breath-sweeteners. Also, if he "loses" more than two handkerchiefs a week, follow him!

DEAR ABBY: I own a nice little two-bedroom cottage, which I advertised for rent. A nice-looking young fellow answered the ad, saying he planned to be married soon. He liked the house and said he wanted his financee to look at it. (She lived in another town.) She arrived the next day, saw the house and liked it, and he signed a year's lease.

The next day, they bought some furnitue and moved right in — together! Abby, they've been living there in my house for two months now, just like husband and wife, I presume.

This is a small town, and I have my reputation to think of. I go to church and am an Eastern Star, and I don't approve of couples living together before marriage.

Yesterday, I asked her if they had set their wedding date, and she said, "Not yet."

What do I tell the neighbors when they ask me who the new couple is? And should I tell this young man and his financee that if they don't get married, they'll have to move? — OLD-FASHIONED

DEAR OLD: You'd better not tell them to move until you know what the law (and their lease) reads. There are two bedrooms in the house, so as long as they pay the rent on time, don't damage the property and don't disturb the neighbors, how can their personal sleeping arrangments harm you or anyone else?

Women in Heavy Work Not a Trend—Employers

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Employers' Council says the trickle of women into traditionally male jobs involving heavy work is exceptional and does not indicate a trend.

The council recently conducted a study and said a sample of managers and female workers agreed that women can do blue-collar work, but they were not enthusiastic about women performing these jobs.

John G. Fricks, the council's industrial relations research manager who conducted the study, said the sample included 103 managers, most of them men, and 117 working women.

The study disclosed that traditional values in the employment of women continue to prevail, with 38 per cent of the managers and nearly 50 per cent of the women not convinced that some women would be just as capable of doing certain jobs as some men.

The managers and women agreed that white-collar jobs are more suited to women than blue-collar jobs. The managers felt that non-supervisory jobs were more appropriate for women, while the women felt they were suited for managerial jobs, the study indicated.

Large percentages of managers in selected industries — construction, forestry, electrical manufacturing, mining and shipbuilding — said they were willing to hire women for white-collar jobs, including managerial positions, once their minds are made up that women can handle the jobs.

Some of the reasons given for not wanting to hire women for certain jobs were:

—"I am not convinced that some women are just as capable of doing the job as a man would be;"

—"Women may not have the necessary command as supervisors over a group which includes men."

The study said these same reasons were most frequently cited by women in explaining why they would not want to be hired for certain jobs. Another frequent reason was difficulty in obtaining promotions in male-dominated industries.

'Cream-Puff, Jelly-Roll' Canadians

TORONTO (CP) — Ninety-one per cent of Canadians can afford to eat nutritiously but don't, Linda Beardall, a Toronto nutritionist says.

She told a meeting of the family studies division of the Ontario Educational Association that the average Canadian is a cross between a cream puff and a jelly roll.

She said her remark was "tongue-in-cheek but closer to the truth than we wish to admit."

Mrs. Beardall said many consumers are unable to make wise food choices because of the large number of products available in supermarkets. They confuse nutrition information in the media and a lifestyle that causes them to rely heavily on fast-food outlets for meals.

Most large supermarkets stock 10,000 different food items compared with 900 in 1928, she said. And by 1980, more than 15,000 items will be available. About 55 per cent of the products are convenience foods, she said.

Welch Medical Report

By DR. WILLIAM J. WELCH

When a suspicious shadow in a chest X-ray looks like lung cancer and proves on further study to be one, it is very often too late for any treatment to eradicate the disease. More often than not, it is already in an advanced stage.

Indeed sometimes the first sign of lung cancer may be trouble elsewhere in the body to which the cancer cells have spread well before the original tumor can be identified in the lung in a chest X-ray.

Experienced doctors, when confronted with a patient who has signs and symptoms of a brain tumor, will always want to examine X rays of the patient's chest with great care because of the frequency with which lung cancers spread and mimic a primary brain tumor, often having produced no lung symptoms whatever.

In part because of these grim realities, a screening program to detect lung cancer as early as possible has been undertaken by the National Cancer Institute.

As one important participant in that program, the Mayo Clinic began three years ago to screen men over 45 who smoke a pack or more of cigarettes a day.

Some 7,800 men, none of whom on entering the study were complaining of symptoms involving the lungs or the upper respiratory tract, have so far been enrolled in the program, and the goal is to increase the number to 10,000 by the end of 1975.

Three times each year at four-month intervals, each man submits to an X-ray study of the chest, fills out a lung-health questionnaire and collects all sputum he may cough up over a three-day period. His sputum is carefully studied for the presence of tumor cells.

In the group so far, unsuspected cancers of the lung and of the upper reaches of the respiratory passages have been discovered in 62 men.

It is of interest that in 15 of these men, cancer was found to have developed in the course of follow-up, after an initially normal examination.

In 34 men who had normal chest X rays, cancer was detected by microscopic examination of their sputum. Once they were suspected in sputum studies, localization of the cancers was established by further study with a flexible lighted tube, which can be slipped down the throat and into the windpipe for direct examination of the lining of the bronchus.

Dr. David R. Sanderson, assistant professor of medicine at the Mayo Medical School, is encouraged with his findings thus far but stresses that the most promising results appear to depend on screening population groups that are at the highest risk of developing lung cancer. Previous studies, he says, put primary stress on X-ray studies and did not concentrate on high-risk groups.

Other institutions participating in the National Cancer Institute's program of early detection of lung cancer are the Johns Hopkins School of Medicine in Baltimore, Md., and the Memorial Sloan Kettering Cancer Centre in New York City.

Phobia Normal Anxiety Out of Kilter

CAVEAT EMPTOR

By LYNNE GORDON

At some point in our lives, we have all been afraid; but in some cases our fears may be crippling, keeping from functioning effectively on a day-to-day level.

Some of us develop phobias, or persistent fears of specific things, people, places or situations. A phobia can be like a normal anxiety, except that it has "gotten out of kilter."

Normal anxiety occurs as a reaction to a situation which should arouse anxiety in everybody; such as the danger of being caught in a head-on collision while driving on a slippery road, or capsizing in a boat in stormy waters. But if we are afraid in safe places like a crowded elevator, an enclosed third floor balcony or on a calm lake, then we are reacting unnaturally.

When we have phobias that we don't understand, we are more vulnerable to quick cures, ineffective treatment, useless advice.

Some consumers may turn to alcohol to handle their unexplained, disabling fears, others have been treated for thyroid conditions, and some have even followed the advice of well-meaning friends who say "it's all in your head . . . go get your hair done or go on a shooping spree . . ." Still others have become involved in expensive, long-term psychiatry. Pills, drugs and anti-depressants may also become a way of trying to cope with certain phobias, rather than as an aid to treatment.

Many of us live with some form of phobia. It may be ACROPHOBIA, a fear of heights, CLAUSTROPHOBIA, a fear of closed places; phobias that involve fear of water, crowds, sex, injury, sickness, dirt, noise.

Recently more attention has been paid to a little known phobia called AGROPHOBIA — a fear of open spaces. A behavior therapist, Dr. Stephen Neiger, describes it more accurately as increasing apprehension, fear, anxiety and ultimately panic in direct proportion to walking or riding distances away from home. In other words, the symptoms get worse as you get farther away from home.

On a deeper level, he says, agorophobia is not a fear of open spaces but is really a fear of people. In his opinion the agrophobic is ultimately afraid of making a fool of themselves in front of other people.

When the agrophobic leaves the front door, they may have a panic attack. Panic attacks are different from person to person. In some, vision gets blurry, knees feel weak and there may be a feeling of nausea, fainting — even a fear of going insane.

Some handle these attacks by running, in order to prevent something "horrible" from happening. Dr. Neiger says the most important thing is to relax and know that nothing fatal is going to happen, so the phobia will pass.

Behavior therapy is not for everyone. Patients must be strongly motivated for treatment. The symptoms must be well circumscribed. As of now, free floating anxiety and psychosis cannot be handled this way.

Behavior therapy is a relatively new method of treating various psychological conditions. Behaviour therapists do not spend hours delving into the past, they are "here-and-now" oriented. Systematic desensitization is perhaps the most widely used method of behavior therapy.

To explain it simply, the patient is taught to relax thoroughly and is instilled with as much sense of immediate safety and confidence as possible. When he is completely relaxed, he is given minimal exposure to the sort of thing he may be afraid of — whether it is a rat, heights, the touch of a spouse, closed spaces or the possibility of having to make a speech. To start with the patient may be asked just to IMAGINE the threatening situation, and gradually work up to actually experiment.

An agrophobic would imagine leaving home then eventually take longer and longer walks away from home.

Most important don't diagnose yourself. Some people have a tendency to latch on to every symptom described and immediately assume they fit the picture. It's important to find knowledgeable, professional help.

One of the dangers, according to Dr. Neiger, is that so little is known about agrophobia. He says one professional even asked if agrophobia had something to do with agriculture.

There are volunteer groups springing up all over the country. The idea is to call, describe your experiences and get some direction.

For more information you can write to Dr. Stephen Neiger, Behavior Therapy Clinic, Lakeshore Psychiatric Hospital, Toronto 14, Ontario.

Strike Voted By Airline Employees

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Canadian Airline Employees Association, the union which handles the financial records of Air Canada, noted Thursday in favor of strike action, a spokesman said.

No strike date has been set.

The spokesman said the vote was taken after a close scrutiny by the membership of a conciliation report drawn up by Winnipeg lawyer Duncan Jessiman.

The union executive had recommended rejection of the report and strike action. The spokesman said the vote, by 420 members, was 65 per cent in favor of a strike to back association demands.

'LEMON TRUCK' OWNER JAILED

MONCTON, N.B. (CP) — Isadore Barr, who showed his displeasure with a Ford auto dealer by parking a truck decorated with painted lemons near its showrooms, was released from jail Thursday after apologizing to a provincial supreme court judge for violating a court order.

The order, issued June 10, ordered Barr to refrain from exhibiting publicly any means calculated to injure Brunswick Ford Sales Ltd.

The company served a writ of libel and slander against Barr last June after he parked a Ford truck near the dealer's lot. Lemons and other references to the truck were painted on the vehicle.

A lawyer for the firm said Barr had agreed to remove the material from the truck on July 31, but brought it back later.

Barr's lawyer said the agreement included the company's promise to have two Ford mechanics inspect the vehicle to determine what was wrong with it. He said this promise was not carried out.

Barr spent more than 24 hours in a jail cell before apologizing. The company's suit will be heard in court at a later date.

Editor Freed

BUENOS AIRES (Reuter) — Police released the news-editor of the English language newspaper Buenos Aires Herald Thursday after holding him for 12 hours. Argentine-born Andrew Graham Yooll, 32, said he was questioned about communiques from left-wing guerrilla groups operating in Argentina which were found by police in his desk.

MARKING HER 100TH birthday Wednesday was Mrs. Margaret Alice White who has been a resident of Victoria for 68 years. Mrs. White, who lives with her daughter Mrs. Alice Stephen on Palliser Avenue in View Royal, was born in Nottingham, England, and came to Canada in 1903, two years after she married Robert White.

Arson Claim Denied

A Crown witness denied Thursday that he set fire to the Jehovah Witness Kingdom Hall on Joan Crescent a year ago and put the blame on others.

Raymond Kapfer gave the denial during cross-examination by Don Farquhar, counsel for Vancouver resident John Robert Atkinson who is accused with Terry Darrow Emerson, 1195 Trans-Canada Highway, of arson in the fire Oct. 13, 1974, which caused $35,000 damage.

Kapfer, a former Jehovah Witness, told county court earlier that Emerson and Atkinson picked him up in a car and said they intended to burn Kingdom Hall.

He denied that it was only after the fire that he met Atkinson and Emerson.

He said "that's not the truth" when it was suggested he didn't meet the accused until 10:30 p.m. Oct. 13.

Evidence from the preliminary hearing last January was read to him in which he said "somewhere around there, 10:30" when asked what time he was with the accused.

Kapfer said "as far as I know it is" when asked Thursday if his preliminary hearing testimony was correct.

He responded "not really" when asked if he doesn't have a good memory of the Oct. 13 night and agreed his memory is worse now than at the preliminary hearing.

Kapfer, who admitted to a criminal record including assault, breaking and entering and theft, possession of stolen property and theft, said he used to attend Kingdom Hall on Joan Crescent with his parents.

Asked why he didn't drive off and call police when the burning occurred, he said "the car's not mine. I could have been charged with theft.

Asked why he didn't try to get out of the car at a gas station when he knew of plans to burn the hall, he said "I can't think of any good reason."

"So there wasn't a good reason," asked Doug Christie, counsel for Emerson.

"Right," replied Kapfer.

He denied rebelling against his parents' wishes to devote time to the church but admitted he had had enough to leave home.

"You thought that if you burned the church you wouldn't have to go anymore and your father wouldn't bug you," asked Farquhar.

"No."

You don't agree with me?

"That's right."

He said there were "disagreements, not arguments" over church attendance.

Alfred Seinen told court he was leaving his son's apartment opposite Kingdom Hall on Joan Crescent and saw two young men running from the building and a car rolling down the hill with a driver.

The car slowed and the two young men jumped in and "took off speedily." He then heard a shattering of glass, an explosion and an outburst of flames.

Asked if the slow movement of the car looked co-ordinated with the appearance of the two young men, he replied "yes indeed."

TERROR CAMPAIGN FEARED

LONDON (Reuter) — Scotland Yard fears that a bomb explosion Thursday that killed a leading cancer expert may be the start of a campaign of terror against British politicians.

Politicians were warned today to be on their guard against bomb attacks like the one at the home of Conservative MP Hugh Fraser.

Police fear the bomb may signal the start of a campaign against politicians and prominent figures replacing terror attacks on crowded meeting places.

Police suspect the bomb was planted by Irish Republican guerrillas and was meant for Fraser, who has advocated the firing squad for bombers.

However, the 57-year-old member of Parliament also is a strong supporter of Israel in the Middle East dispute and police do not rule out the possibility that the attack may be connected with his pro-Zionist views.

City to Shop For Insurance

City council is going to do some comparison shopping for its $29 million worth of insurance coverage, just to see if it really is getting the deal Victoria insurance agents say it is.

Council's finance committee Thursday authorized city manager Jim Bramley to take the city's list of insurance needs to an outside agent, probably in Vancouver, to compare prices.

Mayor Peter Pollen, who earlier accused Victoria insurance brokers of having a "backscratching" arrangement in regards to the city's coverage, said at the committee meeting that the brokers did not compete.

"If we're going to have a free and competitive system, it's got to be free and competitive," the mayor told four insurance representatives who attended the meeting to defend their cause.

"It's the underwriters who are competing, where are you people competing?" Pollen asked.

Under the present system, one city broker, Ker and Stephenson, receives half the commission resulting from the city's insurance coverage, while the other half is given to the Victoria Insurance Agent's Association.

Association president Ian Rendle explained to committee members that the system was initiated by the city about 20 years ago.

Rendle said that the one broker who got the commission would discuss the best possible insurance coverage for the city with other brokers.

He said the association was entirely objective and honorable in the matter and that "good faith still operates."

But council seemed to think the commission, which amounts to about $3,000 annually, could be lowered if the agents were to compete in a tender system.

Rendle said best interests of the client were "not inherent in the tender system of insurance."

He was told council would probably not go to a tender system, but it would examine other agents' prices.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 29-year-old man who has spent much of his life behind bars was sentenced to six months more in jail when he pleaded guilty in provincial court Thursday to theft and being unlawfully at large.

Alexander Fiddler escaped from William Head Sept. 21 and is serving a term on the Lower Mainland for armed robbery.

He also pleaded guilty to theft of $264 and $16 from a purse the same day as his escape, and received two years concurrent.

Fiddler kept his scarred face lowered and did not speak throughout proceedings.

His escape marked one of the few days in the last 20 years he has not been in jail, defence counsel Malcolm McMicken told Judge Harold Alder.

Starting in an orphanage at nine, Fiddler went to reformatory at 13 and was in prison at 17, said McMicken, his only respites in day passes and three escapes.

★ ★ ★

Three youths were charged in provincial court Thursday with breaking and entering a Victoria nightclub earlier this week.

One of the three, Larry Dunphy, 17, Regency Shield Hotel, was ordered held in custody by Judge Harold Alder pending fixing of preliminary hearing date Tuesday.

Prosecutor Peter Birkett told the court Dunphy is on bail on an Oct. 20 charge of car theft, and has only been in Victoria from New Brunswick for two months.

He was the only one not represented by counsel.

Frederick Heins, 17, of 1714 Newton, and Carl Bamforth, 18, of Victoria, were also charged and released on their own recognizance.

Police said about $200 in coins was stolen when thieves broke into Sappho's, 1616 Blanshard, and pried open six slot machines.

A man who stole goods and cash worth $107.33 from Smitty's Pancake House, 850 Douglas during October, pleaded guilty to three counts of theft.

James B. Mino was remanded to Nov. for pre-sentence report.

Mino had been doing janitorial work at Smitty's when the incidents occurred.

★ ★ ★

Alan Gordon Bates, who had two previous narcotics convictions, changed his plea to guilty for possession of marijuana.

Bates, 19, of 724 Yates, was fined $75, put on three months probation and told to do eight hours community work.

He was arrested downtown Oct. 10 with 10 marijuana cigarettes.

★ ★ ★

Roy Henry Joseph, 21, no fixed address, pleaded guilty to mischief and will pay $150 to the Six Mile House motel, 494 Island Highway.

He was given a suspended sentence and three months probation for breaking four windows and a television set Wednesday in the motel room.

★ ★ ★

Larry Jeffrey Mutter, 19, of 2605 Sooke, received 14 days in jail for probation breach when he appeared before Judge Fred Green.

He breached probation orders to keep the peace when found guilty June 30 of obstructing a peace officer.

A man operating a 17-foot motor boat without a lifejacket was fined $10 when he pleaded guilty.

In traffic court, Valent Hacmanjek, 55, of 2923 Quadra, was found guilty of impaired driving and failing to submit to a breathalizer test and fined $550.

Other fines for impaired driving went to Frank Marshall Hoggan, 28, of 947 Hereward, $400; Harold R. Beckensell, 44, of 547 Broadway, $500; Urban Caissie, 45, of 2512 Douglas, $350; James A. C. Harrison, 41, of 885 Old Esquimalt, $350; and Hubert Edward Deforge, 35, of 944 Tattersal, $350.

★ ★ ★

In traffic court Thursday, John Hugh Gwilt, 49, of 310 Robert, was sentenced to 15 days and six months probation when he pleaded guilty to care and control of a car while impaired. A charge of failing to take a breathalizer test was withdrawn.

Leonard Gerald Riekki, 19, of 46 Crease, was found guilty of impaired driving and fined $300.

Others who pleaded guilty to impaired driving were Bernard Andrew Brazier, 18, of 219 Suzanne Pl., $350 fine and no social driving for five months; and John Richard Grigg, 28, of 948 Esquimalt, fined $400.

Fines for impaired driving were also levied on Mohinder Singh Mangat, 27, no fixed address, $350; Robert Paul Johnson, 21, of 3084 Milgrove, $350; Michael William Mullen, 18, of 591 Latoria, $300; Ian Terry Wilson, 26, of 421 Creed, $300; and Gary Steven Woolcock, 19, of 1830 Fern, $250.

Officials' Raises Passed in July

OTTAWA (Times News Service) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Thursday that public service pay raises being criticized by the Opposition were authorized by the cabinet July 24.

Progressive Conservative and NDP MPs said there were rumors that some of the raises, ranging between $2,000 and $6,000 for about 1,150 top-level officials, were approved after Trudeau announced the wage-and-price control program, Oct. 13.

The raises had averaged 9.3 per cent. Salaries of the SX or senior executive category range between $27,500 and $54,000.

The government wage control program sets an upper limit on salary increases of $2,400 a year. Trudeau said that limit will apply next April when the pay question for the executive category arises again.

Trudeau said the cabinet did not deal with the executive salary issue at its cabinet meeting Oct. 13 — a few hours before he went on national television to announce the controls.

The prime minister said the cabinet had received a report on executive salaries last April from a private advisory committee.

The cabinet had approved it on July 23, but the actual calculation of raises for each individual "took weeks."

It was possible some executives had not received their increase yet and retroactive pay dating back to last April.

Although there was fluctuation as to what each individual got, Trudeau said the average increase granted the 1,150 top officials was 9.3 per cent.

"We set 10 per cent as the limit of the total wage package," he said, "and thereby anticipated the wage controls."

The control program limits wage increases to a maximum of 10 per cent a year and no more than $2,400.

Crime Fighters To Meet

Some of North America's top crime-fighters are coming to Victoria for the three-day Pacific Northwest Conference on Organized Crime starting Wednesday at The Empress.

About 150 law enforcement officers from across Canada and western U.S. are expected to participate.

Special guests include William Cleveland, assistant director of the FBI in charge of investigation of organized crime in the U.S.; Ontario Provincial Police commissioner Harold Graham; and RCMP assistant commissioner William Neill, who is in charge of the force's national intelligence service.

Graham achieved nationwide fame as the officer in charge of the investigation in the Stephen Truscott case.

Deputy attorney-general David Vickers will address the group on Thursday.

Seminars scheduled throughout the three-day period will be open only to delegates.

Referendum Split Urged For Duncan

DUNCAN — The community centre committee has recommended to the Cowichan Valley Region Board that a single yes or no ballot approach be taken here in the $6.3 million referndum for a community centre Dec. 20.

It had been suggested that the referendum be split into parts giving the voters an opportunity to express their feelings on each facility included in the project.

But the committee thought a split in the referendum approach would produce too many divisions among interested groups in the community.

Land Claims In Slump Fears

WHITEHORSE (CP) — The Indian land claims controversy was dragged into the Northern Resources Conference Thursday amid a prediction of an unprecedented Yukon recession if claims are not settled.

Allen Lueck of Whitehorse, lawyer for the Council of Yukon Indians, said the natives might launch court action that would create economic uncertainty and an exodus of exploration and building investment.

Urging a swift and fair settlement, Lueck accused some territorial government representatives of "prejudice, dishonesty and outright hatred," towards Indians.

He quoted a Toronto Star report in which Yukon Education Minister Dan Lang said "someone will get killed" if white Yukon residents are excluded from a land claims settlement with Ottawa.

It is obvious that Lang meant the someone would be Indian, said Lueck.

He then quoted from a Toronto Star editorial which grouped Lang, 27, with "hardhats and rednecks" and described him as a fan of limited vision.

Some observers said Yukon government officials were embarrassed that Lueck raised the controversy before the 300 convention delegates, most from outside the territory.

The delegates represent mainly the mining industry, related businesses and governments.

Lang declined comment after reading the newspaper report and editorial and scheduled a news conference for today.

Lueck predicted the land claims negotiations will end in six to eight months and there could be court injunctions to restrain government and industry from using land claimed by the Indians.

It was possible that mines and other resource industries would be involved, he said.

"It would appear that any private corporation or individual carrying on any activity in the Yukon which interferes with the lifestyle of any Indian people is subject to attack in the courts with a good chance of success on the part of the Indian people."

HI FROM HOCHELAGA

His gentle shot at the Liberals brought hoots of delight from the Conservatives who revelled over Lavoie's upset victory over Communications Minister Pierre Juneau in a Montreal by-election last Oct. 14.

All parties applauded the new MP as he was escorted into the chamber by Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield and Claude Wagner, his chief Quebec spokesman.

Basford Rejects Extra Justice Cost Sharing

HALIFAX (CP) — Justice Minister Ron Basford rejected an angry request Thursday from Canada's provincial attorneys-general that the federal government pay a greater share of the cost of administering justice.

"We are not entering into any new or expensive cost-sharing programs," Basford told reporters after a meeting with the provincial attorneys-general.

He pointed out, however, that Prime Minister Trudeau said in his announcement of wage and price restraints on Thanksgiving Day that federal spending on justice programs will be exempt from the 10-per-cent maximum, and "we'll be spending more money this year and next on justice programs."

The provinces pay for almost all policing and court administration, while the federal government shares the cost of legal aid programs and pays for RCMP narcotics investigations and non-provincial RCMP activities.

Justice Minister Alex Hickman of Newfoundland, who had presided at a meeting of the attorneys-general Wednesday which Basford did not attend, said the provincial ministers were "discouraged that the government is not prepared to enter into cost-sharing programs in the administration of justice."

Hickman said federal officials have used the argument that the British North America Act makes it the responsibility of the federal government to enact criminal laws and the responsibility of the provinces to administer them.

"If they choose to hide behind the constitution, we have a concern that Canadians should know where the fault lies," Hickman said. "It does not lie with the provincial departments of justice.

LAND CLAIM SPEED-UP PLAN

OTTAWA (CP) — The Trudeau government Thursday appointed a special negotiator to speed up the settlement of native people's land claims in northern and western Canada.

Indian Affairs Minister Judd Buchanan announced that A. Digby Hunt was being pulled from the post of assistant deputy minister in his department to assume the "special mandate."

He said there had been some reservations about Hunt's background which was mainly in northern development work focussing on oil and gas resources.

However, he said he hoped Indian groups would be satisfied with the appointment of a "top-flight official" to tackle the difficult land claims job.

Although other negotiation mechanisms existed, he said the appointment of Hunt would show how "serious" the government was in its desire to reach agreement with Indian groups.

As such he will deal broad land claims in areas where the native rights have never been extinguished by treaty.

Buchanan said Hunt would focus on such claims in the Yukon, the Northwest Territories and "hopefully" British Columbia.

Grant Deadline Extended

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government has extended to Dec. 31 the occupancy time limit for new homeowners eligible for the $500 home owner grant.

Urban Affairs Minister Barney Danson said in the Commons Thursday that the Oct. 31 deadline was extended to benefit those who have bought or started building their homes but who were prevented by construction industry strikes or other problems from moving in by the required date.

Danson said that the deadline extension will apply only to buyers who either have a bonafide accepted offer to purchase or started construction on or before Oct. 31.

Payment under the extended occupancy provision, however, will have to wait until Parliament has approved the extension.

Outside the House, the minister told reporters that 53,000 applications have been approved cost a total $2.7 million so far under the grant program for new home owners.

He said that the program will not be extended into next year because he expects to bring forward shortly a new program which will be more appropriate to the current housing and economic situation.

Bomb Threat In Commons

OTTAWA (CP) — A middle-aged woman was removed from the Commons public gallery Thursday afternoon when she yelled out that she had "A bomb from Quebec."

Police declined to release the woman's name.

She was carrying what appeared to be a radio wrapped in a piece of paper.

Protective staff officials questioned her in an office on the first floor of the Centre Block. But a spokesman said no charges were expected.

"I think she's just a kook," said the spokesman.

The spokesman said persons involved in such incidents normally are not charged. But their names usually are placed on a list of persons barred from entering Commons galleries.

By PETER THOMSON
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The federal government Thursday affectively killed the Canadian edition of Time Magazine.

Although executives of Time Canada have not confirmed the demise of the Canadian edition, it is expected publication will cease at the end of the year when special tax exemptions granted to Time and Reader's Digest expire.

Legislation to remove special tax status is expected to be approved before Christmas.

It will require that advertising costs will be deductible for income tax purposes only in Canadian publications.

To classify as Canadian, publications must be at least 75 per cent Canadian owned and substantially "different from" parent publications in content.

The Canadian Reader's Digest announced some time ago it could not meet the requirements.

Time Inc. announced it would go along with the ownership requirement by selling 75 per cent of Times Canada to Canadian interests, but required a definition of "different from" to see if the move would be practicable.

Revenue Minister Bud Cullen yesterday applied the clincher. He announced that written and pictorial contents of Canadian periodicals "must be more than 80 per cent different from material which has appeared in foreign periodicals," to permit the deduction of advertising costs for income tax purposes.

Cullen said that since 1965 a Canadian taxpayer has been entitled to a business deduction for the cost of advertising directed to a market in Canada only if it was for advertising space in a Canadian issue of a Canadian publication.

Time and Reader's Digest were exempted from the general rule.

He explained yesterday that the government's policy now requires that more than 80 per cent of the contents of a Canadian periodical must be material that has not appeared in any current or prior issues of foreign publications with which the Canadian publication may have any type of continuing arrangement for access to material.

The minister stated that literary contents of a Canadian issue of a periodical need neither be written by Canadians nor be on essentially Canadian subjects.

The Royal visitors all tasted his Scotch Whisky, and approved.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

In retrospect, today's deal was not a difficult one for the West player to defend correctly. But when the deal arose, the West defender was not on his toes; and the result was that a contract which should have been defeated was fulfilled.

Neither side vulnerable. South deals.

	NORTH ♠ 98 ♥ Q9864 ♦ A763 ♣ J3
	SOUTH ♠ KJ ♥ AJ1072 ♦ QJ9 ♣ A76

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	2 ♣	Dbl.
2 ♥	Pass	3 ♥	Pass
4 ♥	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Four of ♠.

North's two-club bid was the initiation of the Stayman Convention, and East's double showed a club suit, plus a desire to have clubs led. However, West, for some reason, decided to lead a spade, which East won with the ace. At trick two East shifted to the king of clubs, which was allowed to win the trick. The continuation of the club queen was taken by South's ace.

The queen of diamonds was led next, and when West played low, the queen won the trick. The king of spades was then cashed, and this was followed by the lead of South's remaining club. West, mistakenly, discarded a spade on this lead. Dummy, of course, trumped.

Now came a trump to South's ace, after which another trump lead was made, West's king winning. West was now end-played. If he played back a spade, it would be ruffed in dummy as South, on this lead, would discard his diamond nine. And if, instead, West led a dimond away from his king, declarer would win two more diamond tricks.

When South made his third club lead, West could have avoided being end-played by trumping with his king of trumps. He could then safely have exited by leading his remaining trump. The defenders would now have had their "book"; and, in time, they would have made a diamond trick.

Actually, declarer did not play the hand properly, although he emerged as the winner. Before leading his third club (to be ruffed in dummy), he should have cashed his ace of trumps. West would now have the singleton king remaining. If he ruffed the third club, he would be end-played. And if he discarded a spade instead, declarer, after ruffing the club in dummy, would simply lead a trump, throwing West into the lead, to achieve the same end-play position.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Saturday, Oct. 25

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Activity flares in area usually dormant. You find that "quiet people" seem argumentative. Key is to maintain emotional balance. Older individual, who does care for you, needs reassurance. Know it and be kind. Check facts, figures. Do your homework!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Stay out of traffic. If necessary, walk. You probably could use the exercise. Mars-Moon conjunction is in section of chart which coincides with accidents, cuts, burns — and disagreements with pugnacious neighbors, relatives. On positive side, you receive token of affection from one who previously seemed distant. What a day!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Friend who "talks money" could be testing, evaluating — and getting ready to make a confession. Accent is on improving home situation, beautifying surroundings, making peace with stubborn family member. Taurus, Libra and Scorpio could be involved.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Many say you are a "new you." One who pulls strings attempts to make room for you at more elevated position. But refuse to be intimidated by apparent favor. Know your worth and don't sell yourself short. Insist on certain term, conditions which are reasonable—and which you earned.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Key is organization. Leave nothing to chance. Outline goals, duties. Behind-scenes activity is more important than usual. You are asked to represent special group, club or organization. Cancer, Capricorn persons command your attention.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You get what you need to fulfill desire. Key is timing, proper approach and decision enabling you to know what you really require. Get rid of procedure which is outmoded, costly, clumsy. Aires, Libra could be involved.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Green light is flashed by one who has authority to promote your standing in community. Accent is on goal, ambition, relationship with professional superior. Gemini, Sagittarius persons could play key roles.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You can renew contacts, correspondence. You learn what is needed and you can do something constructive about it. Aquarian figures prominently. You gain access to information which provides confidence. Travel plans are stimulated.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You find out where missing links are located. Money is counted, investments are evaluated, partnership proposals are analyzed. Gemini and another Sagittarian could be involved. Give full play to intellectual curiosity. Don't be shy about asking questions.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Legal matters, property rights, odler persons and "their ways" — these are highlighted. Dig deep for facts, figures. Obtain hint from Sagittarius message. Accent on legal affairs, complicated series of rights, permissions. Persist!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Be ready for change, opportunity, special relationship. Gemini, Virgo figure prominently. Accent is on health, employment, diet, service. What had been slipshod can be corrected with call, letter. Refuse to be intimidated by one who claims "tenure."

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Values are placed, discussed. Don't sell yourself short. Your abilities, collections are worth plenty — know it and act like you are aware of it. Emotions tend to dominate. Give logic an equal chance. Taurus, Libra figure in picture.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are introspective, spiritual, somewhat of a perfectionist. Pisces, Virgo persons play important roles in your life. Next month conditions settle to extent that puzzle pieces will fall into place. In December, major domestic adjustment occurs. You are vibrant, temperamental, sensitive, stubborn.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

"A good guess, but I won't be that old till my birthday in 1976." Glen chuckled. "In fact, the square of the sum of what my age and Susie's will be then will be the actual year I was born."

How old will Susie be?

Thanks for an idea to P. Wimmer, Toronto, Ontario.

A New Use for an Old Porch

Several thousand enclosed glass porches or sunrooms are still a part of Victoria's older homes though non-existent in those built since the early 1950s.

The greater number of these enclosed spaces are or could be made frost-proof with a minimum of cost and labor, both recoverable by a year or two of plant growing within them.

The advantages of these sheltered though unheated areas are almost comparable to those from an unheated small conventional greenhouse — with the balance slightly in favor of the porch from the owner's point of consideration.

Lack of overhead light is a disadvantage to the plants during winter especially from late January when the sun rides higher each day and plants begin to show new growth.

Some porch owners get lights in the roof when the structure is of a lean-to type. Additional benefit of these is in summer if the lights are hinged to open, by allowing hot air to escape.

In winter, sealing is needed to prevent the escape of the needed warm air, and to exclude rain or melting snow.

A glass-enclosed porch will be several degrees warmer on a winter's night than a free-standing glasshouse without heat. The wall of the house will have a sheltering effect, and a house door or window overlooking the porch allows a degree of house warmth to escape into it even without leaving them open to cool the home.

A decided advantage to the owner is having the plants close at hand for last minute covering with paper on cold nights, and for early removal in morning.

No frantic forays into gales around this by inserting glass or blizzards to see what is going on in the stranded greenhouse.

A second advantage is having the plants where they are seen, admired, and used close at hand every day and into the evenings.

In early spring, the incentive to get seedlings started has every encouragement.

An hour will see a lot accomplished because the 60 minutes allotted are not split into fragments for putting on a lot of extra clothes to go outdoors to another building. And the coffee pot is close at hand when the job is done.

With glass on three sides, an enclosed porch will be fragrant and beautiful with even a half dozen pots of early spring bulbs to come into bloom. They will last much longer there than in the heated house.

Kinds not suited to hosue culture may be enjoyed earlier than those in the open garden.

Early crocuses, snowdrops, scillas, tiny bulbous irises, and species narcissi and tulips will thrive in an unheated sunporch. All they need is to have hard freezing temperatures and blasting northeast wind excluded.

Green plants for adding extra flavor to winter meals are possible too.

According to size and equipment, plus the inventiveness of you, the owner, not only hardy herbs as parsley, mint, thyme and rosemary will be grown in containers for everyday use, but others too.

No reason why three pots of chives shouldn't be kept producing; the same number filled with chickweed, and an 18-inch long box of lettuce continually being used and replanted.

After the end of January, possibilities extend to the limit. And the limit is bounded only by imagination and interest of the owners of these glassed-in porches and sunrooms.

SHANGRI-LA
SAANICH PENINSULA
Here stands a waterfront property of over one acre in size that really is a Shangri-La. A private and secluded winding black topped road takes you through lovely trees and garden to the waterfront and the large 2-bedroom main home. Yes, there is a completely self-contained guest cottage also. Space does not permit all the glowing reports I may give you. However, to mention a few — there is wall-to-wall carpeting throughout, picture windows overlooking entire seaward side, white shell beach, wall-to-ceiling fireplace of Roman brick, heatilator in living room, fireplace also in family room. Property on city water, permanent sea wall, large sundeck and patio over boathouse with boat winch, hot-water heating, and believe me I could go on and on. Full price $135,000. MLS. DEPARTMENT OF ENVIRONMENT FISHERIES AND MARINE SERVICE

Sealed tenders marked "Purchase of Farm Raised Fish" will be received by the Director, Pacific Biological Station, Nanaimo, B.C. V9R 5K6 up to noon P.S.T. on 31st October, 1975. The tenders for the purchase of an estimated 2000 coho and 2000 sockeye salmon to dress out head-on ½ to 1 lb each and an estimated 100 sockeye to dress out head-on 1 to 2 lbs. each, is to be submitted in letter form on a price per lb. basis, f.o.b. Pacific Biological Station, Nanaimo. Figures are estimates only and could be lower or higher than stated. More fish are available if a smaller size is acceptable or less fish if minimum size must be greater than ½ lb. dressed weight.

All fish are expected to be in good condition and are to be processed for human consumption only. Weight of fish will be determined by Department personnel who will provide the necessary scales. All containers required to remove the fish and any other necessary items are to be provided by the buyer.

To be considered, tenders must be accompanied by a money order or certified cheque payable to the Receiver General of Canada in the amount of 10% of the tender based on an estimated 5000 lb. of fish in the round. The deposit of the successful tenderer will be retained until satisfactory completion of the operation. Payment for fish taken is payable to the Receiver General of Canada within 10 days of the pick up. Purchaser will take delivery of the fish between 10th and 14th November, 1975, both dates inclusive, either live or freshly killed in the round.

The Department reserves the right to reject any or all tenders and the highest tender will not necessarily be accpeted

Fraud Probe Demand Into N.Y. Finances

WASHINGTON (WP) — Sen. James Buckley called Thusday for a justice department investigation into the possibility that New York City officials had violated federal laws by misrepresenting the city's financial condition.

At the same time Federal Reserve chairman Arthur Burns urged Congress to make up its mind quickly whether to assist new york on its curent financial crisis.

"Almost any resolution of these uncertainties may be better than prologed debate and controversy," Burns told a House banking sub-committee on economic stabilization.

"Financial markets do not thrive in such an environment."

But the head of the U.S. central bank said that although he takes "a more serious view" of a potential New York default than he did three weeks ago, he is "not ready to recommend to the Congress that financial assistance to new York is now required in the nation's interest."

Buckley, at a news conference asking for a federal probe, made public a report from Jeremiah McKenna, lawyer for the new York state legislature's select committee on crime.

McKenna said that reports by State Comptroller Arthur Levitt "leave little doubt that recent city borrowings have relied on massive fraud."

Buckley would not say whether he thought that there had been criminal violations and denied that his purpose in calling for an investigation was to delay consideration of legislative aid for the city.

In New York Mayor Abraham Beame called Buckley's charges "a rehash and political interpretation" of a report issued last August by the state comptroller.

Co-incidentally, Robert Reischauer, a special assistant in the Congressional Budget Office, told the house subcommittee that "New York City officials are guilty of irresponsible budget behavior, of spending more than they were receiving and of hiding these practices with budget gimmickry that would relegate the most ingenious of OMB (Office of Management and Budget) directors to the minor leagues."

Reischauer, also parcelled blame out to New York citizens, to the state, and to the federal government.

In earlier testimony, Paul Volcher, president of the New York Federal Reserve Bank — perhaps the secondmost prestigious position in the central bank system behind Burns — warned the committee that "as matters now stand, we cannot be sure a (New York) State agency default will not actually precede default by the city."

MORE GUN OWNERS THAN SMOKERS IN U.S.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — More Americans own guns than smoke cigarettes, drink alcohol or own dishwashers or stereo sets, pollster Louis Harris told Congress today.

In testimony prepared for a senate government operations committee hearing on gun control, Harris also said many people apparently have resigned themselves to the conclusion that it is impossible to prevent the assassination of a president or candidate for the office.

Harris based his statements on a just completed survey of 1,4500 adults, including gun owners and non-owners.

He said that 68 per cent of those polled believe easy availability of guns contributes to violence. Nearly half — 47 per cent — of the households surveyed reported a gun in the house. Only 41 per cent reported them in 1968 at the height of urban riots, Harris added.

AMA Secrets Laid Bare By 'Sore Throat'

WASHINGTON (WP) — Officials of the American Medical Association privately have accused a religious group, the Church of Scientology, of planting members in its offices to remove confidential documents and leak them to reporters and government agencies.

While AMA officials have refused to make these charges publicly, their viens became so widely known that the Scientologists have issued an official denial through their Ministry of Public Relations.

The anonymous man who has been passing on the AMA documents — nicknamed "sore throat" by reporters — called The Washington Post to deny he is a plant of the Scientologists and to insist he will continue to make AMA documents public.

These documents, released over the past five months, have detailed AMA lobbying for the White House; contributions to the AMA's political arm by the drug industry, and AMA attempts to influence votes by campaign contributions.

"They have sparked congressional investigations and probes by the U.S. Postal Service, the Internal Revenue Service and the Federal Elections Commission.

Investigators hired by the AMA reported that the Scientologists are responsible for the leaks and pinpointed three secretaries as the persons who copoed the documents.

They admitted in off-the-record conversations with reporters that they lacked the legal evidence to prove the allegations.

"The covert allegations by AMA officials Joe Brue and Frank Campion (the AMA chief public relations men) are illustrative of an incredibly corrupt organization grasping in the dark to cover their over crimes," said Chris Volz of the Scientologist's Ministry of Public Relations in a letter to The Washington Post.

In his phone call "Sore Thorat" denied knowing the three secretaries — two in the AMA's Washington office and one in its Chicago headquarters — who are being blamed for removing the documents.

"Sore Throat" has claimed since June, when he began releasing AMA documents, that he is a doctor who had been employed by the AMA and laid off in an economy move.

In a statement issued this week, he said he wants to "reform health care in the United States by striking at the source of poor health care and soaring health prices — the AMA."

1,000,000 TV Owners Warned

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Food and Drug Administration said Thursday there may be a radiation problem in about one million Zenith color television sets owned by consumers.

An agency spokesman said as of now the government believes the problem is a "marginal one" at best.

The FDA's bureau of radiological health said it has told the company its sets may not be in compliance with federal rules on radiation emission — a legal first step before the company, and the government can determine whether a recall or other corrective action is needed.

"We are still very, very early in the process of deciding whether there's a public health problem and whether we need to do anything about it," a bureau spokesman said.

The problem, FDA said, is similar in source to one which has caused a corrective repair program on 400,000 imported color television sets, most of them "Panasonic" brand.

The problem, the spokesman said, involves a capacitor which could fail over the space of a couple of minutes, or even hours.

Once it fails the set ceases to work and there is no problem with radiation, he said. But while the failing process is going on, radiation may be escaping which could be higher than the law allows.

No exact identification of the sets involved is yet available, the FDA said, except that they were all manufactured between the spring of 1974 and the spring of 1975, and all have been sold.

Town Flees Peril

FERTILE, Minn. (AP) — The 1,000 residents of this northwestern Minnesota community were asked to leave town today as a precautionary measure during the cleanup of six derailed railway cars loaded with propane.

Mayor Duane Knutson said late Thursday that all residents should leave town at 7 a.m. and remain away during the morning while the tankers are removed.

School was cancelled Thursday and called off again for today. Businesses also were closed Thursday in the aftermath of the derailment and explosion.

A Burlington Northern propane tanker exploded near midnight Wednesday, lighting up the sky and shaking the town. One home was demolished, another set on fire and several others scorched.

No one was seriously injured although five persons were treated for minor burns and cuts from flying glass.

About 350 persons in the western section of the town were evacuated Wednesday night as a precautionary measure. Cause of the explosion and derailment was not immediately determined.

200-YEAR-OLD TURTLE ENDS UP IN THE SOUP

RIO DE JANEIRO (UPI) — A giant turtle estimated to be 200 years old and of a a nearly extinct species was captured off the Brazilian coast and ended up as soup.

The 1,100-pound turtle belonged to the nearly extinct species scientifically known as dermochelys coriacea, only a few of which live in tropical seas.

Fishing regulatory agencies agonized for five hours before authorizing slaughter. The turtle brought 440 pounds of meat.

Pacific Rim Trade Mission

Five local manufacturers under the leadership of provincial trade development officer Dom Piccinin will visit the Philippines, Indonesia and Malaysai.

They will study market requirements for equipment in those areas in light of research indicating a growing need for forestry equipment and technology in the Pacific Rim.

Anderson Changes Mind

The election of at least three new aldermen to Victoria city council beeame a certainty Thursday when Ald. Malcolm Anderson announced he will not seek re-election, as he had announced earlier.

His change of plans is due to the fact that he will be starting a new job on Monday.

Anderson, who has been a stockbroker with Pitfield, Mackay, Ross and Co. Ltd., is joining radio station CJVI as a salesman.

Anderson, 41, has served on council nearly three years. He was first elected in a March, 1973, byelection to fill a vacancy created by the death of Ove Witt.

He has been chairman of the parks and recreation committee and, latterly, of the personnel, labor relations and fire prevention committee.

His announcement means that three of the four aldermanic incumbents will not be offering themselves for re-election in the Nov. 15 civic election.

Ald. Mike Young is contesting the mayoralty, and Ald. Clyde Savage is retiring after 10 years on council. However, Ald. Bill Tindall is running again.

Ed Kop, an electrical contractor who has run as a candidate on several previous occasions, said Thursday he will again try for a seat on city council.

President of the Independent Businessman's Association of B.C., and a member of the Victoria Chamber of Commerce transportation committee for the past three years, Kop said traffic and transportation problems should be high on the city's list of priorities.

He also wants to see emphasis on providing housing and tax relief for senior citizens, and determined pressure on the provincial government to pay its rightful share of property taxes on its holdings in Victoria.

Nominations close at noon on Monday.

ALERT DECLARED IN PORTUGAL

LISBON, Portugal (UPI) — The government declared a nationwide military alert today and began issuing ammunition, grenades and combat food rations to loyal troops in Oporto in face of a right-wing bomb campaign and rumors of an impending coup by the far left.

The nation also was hit by a wave of bombing directed chiefly against left-wing naval officers. By late afternoon there had been nine bomb explosions and key military commanders were summoned to Lisbon to discuss the series of crises.

"The situation here is very tense," one officer reported from Oporto where the government sent armored cars to strategic points of the city and to an army barracks where rebellious soldiers called an anti-government demonstration in defiance of military leaders.

The security precautions in Oporto were taken after the region's military commander, Brig. Antonio Pires Veloso, said he would halt any attempt by the rebellious soldiers to gather at a key artillery base on the outskirts of the city.

Leftists reacted to Veloso's decision by calling their militants for a protest demonstration. The far left urged their militants to leave their jobs and go to the artillery base where the rebel soldiers were holding their meeting.

"Portugal will be very lucky if it survives this weekend without serious trouble," one politician said.

On Thursday night, only 15,000 leftists turned out in answer to Communist calls for a demonstration that some observers expected would be the prelude to an attempt to overthrow the moderate-leftist government.

TUBE STORMED

MONTREAL (CP) — More than 12,000 people marched on city hall while hundreds of others stormed downtown subway stations Thursday to protest recent transit fare increases.

Police spokesmen said the protest was peaceful although a few of the demonstrators, mostly university and junior college students, broke windows at city hall and at one subway station.

Hundreds of students at the station also leaped over turnstiles.

Second Turk Envoy Shot

PARIS (UPI)—Turkish ambassador Ismail Erez and his chauffeur were killed today in the heart of Paris when unknown terrorists machinegunned the envoy's car, police said.

Erez was the second Turkish ambassador murdered within a week. Three gunmen invaded the Turkish embassy in Vienna Wednesday, shot the ambassador to death and fled.

No motive for the slaying of ambassador Danis Tunaligil in Vienna was ever established, but authorities said the slaying was carried out by three swarthy men they described as southern Europeans.

There was some speculation the Turks were slain as result of the Turco-Greek crisis over Cyprus, but police could not confirm this other than saying the killings could have been politically inspired.

Police said two or three men opened fire on the limousine carrying Ambassador Erez on Quai John F. Kennedy, near the Bir Hakeim bridge over the Seine river.

Witnesses said two or three men stepped down from the sidewalk into the slow-moving heavy traffic along the Seine embankment when the Turkish embassy limousine approached.

Police said the men whipped submachine guns from under their coats and opened fire. Submachine guns also were used in the Vienna slaying.

In Ankara, an emergency meeting of the Turkish cabinet was called after news of the Paris slaying was received.

OIL-SOAKED DUCK, a victim of the sudden spill of about 52,000 gallons of oil from an Imperial Oil refinery into the Red River at Winnipeg, is held by 11-year-old Pam Gray. Officials said today they believe emergency measures were successful in containing the oil.

BACK-TO-WORK DEMONSTRATION

Inside Workers Seeking Return to Bargaining

Times News Services

Negotiators for inside postal workers delivered notice to Postmaster-General Bryce Mackasey in Ottawa late Thursday asking for a resumption of contract negotiations in an attempt to end their strike, now in its fourth day.

Jean-Claude Parrot, chief negotiator for the Canadian Union of Postal Workers, said talks could resume when Mackasey lifted an ultimatum that the union accept the government's wage offer before other issues are discussed.

The letter, delivered Thursday night by private courier to the minister's office, says the union bargaining team is prepared to return to negotiations within two hours of a call by Mackasey.

Mackasey told the Commons today that he will reply later today to the letter.

The government "will be ready to put a package together to put before union negotiators after we have had a chance to analyze the letter," he said.

Mackasey added in the House that some of the 22,000 workers have asked for permission to return to work and the post office has granted that permission.

"It would be very nice" if union leaders allowed them to return.

Inside postal workers represented by some New Brunswick and Newfoundland locals are among those willing to work, he added.

As the postmaster-general spoke in the House, about 50 demonstrators marched before the Parliament Buildings urging an end to the strike.

An official of CUPW, taking pictures of the demonstrators, said most appeared to be union members who work part-time.

The official, shop steward Gus Meinert of the 1,200-member Ottawa local, said he was "taking pictures of our members that we want to talk to afterwards" but they were perfectly free to demonstrate as they wished.

Mackasey paid a brief visit to the marchers before entering the Commons and one marcher asked him: "When are you going to investigate that union?"

Mackasey replied: "It is more important that you people clean out your own leadership. . . ."

The marcher asked "what about those goon squads?" He referred apparently to reports of violence in Vancouver and Montreal.

"They are the biggest cowards in the world," said Mackasey.

"They always are — if you people stand up to them, they'll run away."

In Vancouver, Gerald Boyko and Brian Nelson, members of the union, were charged with common assault Thursday after two post office employees said they were prevented from crossing a picket line.

Ten-Mile Point Marine Reserve

The first marine ecological reserves in B.C. have been established in local waters.

Twenty-seven acres of sea bed at the end of Ten-Mile Point and one square nautical mile on the floor of Satellite Channel have been formed into reserves by the provincial government.

Resource Minister Bob Williams said both the channel reserve lying between Salt Spring Island and North Saanich and the Ten-Mile Point reserve are exceptionally rich in marine life and have a long history of use by scientists at the University of Victoria.

"By setting aside these marine, ecological reserves, we do not intend to interefere with navigation or sports fishing," said Williams.

Williams said he hopes the new reserves will encourage UVic to continue its research programs and he asked the public to avoid disturbing those areas and to report any damage noticed.

The government also extended the Baeria Islets ecological reserve in Barclay Sound to include marine areas up to 20-fathom contour.

The area is particularly rich in west coast marine life, said Williams.

Iceland Women Strike

REYKJAVIK (Reuter) — THE WOMEN OF Iceland went on strike today, leaving their menfolk wondering how to run the country without them.

Housewives, women teachers, clerks, industrial workers and even nursemaids all over the island said they were taking the day off, bringing tiny Iceland almost to a standstill.

The militant women — there are about 60,000 of them over the age of 19, said latest census figures — staged their token stoppage to prove just how indispensable they are.

And the men, who treated all the strike threats as a huge joke, began to get the point.

Most shops planned to stay closed for the day, telephone exchanges were left unattended and even radio and television broadcasts were expected to be blacked out because the women refused to take part in the programs.

The government, determined to keep the affairs of state going despite the walkout, said it was impossible to conduct official business by telephone.

The banks had the same problem, although they tried to stay in operation by sending department heads to the counters to replace missing female cashiers.

Spokeswoman Gerdu Steinthorsdottir said the walkout was to show "how indespensable we are in our country's economy and national life.

She added: "We are not demanding any special wage increase. We are only showing that it is a great injustice that women receive lower wages."

Back Taxes Proposed

Logging firms should have to pay heavy penalties for turning Gulf Island tree farms into housing subdivisions, Dave Brousson, a director of Islands Trust, said today.

The companies originally were given major tax benefits when they declared the land Certified Tree Farms and have continued enjoying tax benefits from the special status. The companies should have to pay the foregone taxes when they turn the land to other use, he told the Royal Commission on Forest Resources.

He explained that originally logging companies requested CTF status so that they could reduce property tax and keep the land in tree production.

"Since the owner of the land entered the program knowing that such benefits would accrue over the longer term, it seems equitable to recover taxes foregone if he withdraws from the program."

He added since 1974, the land owners enjoy even greater benefit due to the dramatic increase in the assessment of non-residential land.

The penalty tax assessed should directly be related to the length of time the land has been a tree farm, and at least equal to the compound value of the difference between the taxes paid under the tree-farm certificate, he said.

Brousson said if logging companies were allowed to subdivide their land it would have major impact on some islands.

As an example, he pointed out MacMillan Bloedel in 1972 announced a plan to create up to about 2,700 small lots on a portion of their tree-farm land on Galiano Island.

This would have meant the population on the island, now 500, would have increased 15-fold to over 7,000, he said.

"Such a tremendous increase in population would have completely overwhelmed and altered the existing community," he said. "It was only after a very loud public outcry that the plan was abandoned."

NEWS BRIEFS

Hull Protests

WINNIPEG (CP) — Winnipeg Jets of the World Hockey Association said Friday superstar Bobby Hull has withdrawn temporarily from further participation in hockey to protest the growing violence and "brutality" in the game.

Juneau Quits

Classroom Burns

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — A second school fire in 10 days Thursday destroyed one classroom at a local elementary school. Damage was not estimated, but no injuries were reported and firemen were investigating. Last week eight classrooms were destroyed in a $100,000 blaze at another elementary school.

Franco Improving

MADRID (CP) — A medical bulletin issued today said the condition of Gen. Francisco Franco has improved following a mild heart attack the Spanish chief of state suffered earlier this week and a relapse Thursday.

B.C. Response Today To Ottawa Controls

The provincial cabinet met in special session today and Premier Barrett promised a statement late this afternoon on B.C.'s response to wage and price controls.

Visiting Victoria today, Sen. Ray Perrault said if any province refuses to follow the federal wage and price guidelines the whole program will collapse.

Cabinet was to hear a report from Finance Minister Dave Stupich on the two-day federal-provincial talks in Ottawa on the federal anti-inflation program.

And a key item to be discussed was a legal report on the constitutionality of separate provincial price controls.

It's expected the cabinet will discuss the possibility of bringing in its own price restraints on food and other basic commodities.

Barrett said he would have a full statement to make about 5 p.m. and there is a possibility he will go on television live this evening.

Stupich said Thursday he would recommend to cabinet that B.C. support the federal government's proposed wage and price controls, but his recommendation would have some reservations.

He is not totally satisifed with the federal plan, said Stupich, but he is convinced Ottawa really wants the plan to work.

Perrault government leader in the Senate, said in an interview the guidelines got a big boost when Ontario agreed in principle to support the program but there would have to be unanimous agreement or the program would fail.

Provincial governments have control over provincial civil servants, municipal employees and various professional groups.

He said Ottawa has asked for provincial co-operation but may have to go beyond asking to make the program work. He said it was not clear what the government would do but noted that Ottawa had wide powers under the income tax act to direct the activities of both workers and companies.

Prime Minister Trudeau has said the government may impose a tax surcharge to take back any pay increase above the guidlines.

WEATHER

Tonight, Saturday: Occasional Rain

Perrault said Ottawa hopes to be able to dismantle the wage and price guidelines before the three-year program has been completed.

However, rather than removing the program, Ottawa might have to make it tougher if the present program did not work, he said.

A tougher program would bring more sections of the economy under the regulations but would not go so far as a total freeze, he said. Workers would have to get raises high enough to keep up with the increases in the cost of living.

Meanwhile in Ottawa the anti-inflation bill hit a snag in the Commons Thursday when an all-party agreement to speed second reading fell apart.

Government House leader Mitchell Sharp said Thursday afternoon there was "a reasonable expectation, if not a certainty" that the bill would be given second-reading during the day and referred to the House finance committee for detailed study.

He told MPs he based his assessment on consultations with opposition House leaders, a routine practice in manoeuvring bills through various stages of parliamentary passage.

TEENAGERS HURT BY BOMB ON LAWN

An explosion in the front yard of a Vancouver home injured two persons Thursday night.

Niko Burtini, 16, and his girl friend Wendy Warner, were injured when a bomb-like device went off at the Burtini home, 3061 East 23rd. The explosion was heard six blocks away. It left a hole in the front lawn, took a piece out of the concrete front steps and shattered a picture window in the home. It also shattered the side window of a car parked nearby and put a hole in a neighbor's window.

Police were uncertain whether the explosion was caused by a home-made device made up as a Halloween prank or was intended to cause damage.

They were investigating the possibilities that the device was thrown from a passing car or had been placed on the lawn with some sort of timing device.

The youth was injured in the leg and his girlfriend was hit in the body by flying debris.

Fixed Commissions Ending for Real Estate

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

The day of the fixed commission for real estate sales is ending but this does not mean there will be a price war to attract business, says Norman Ross of Victoria, newly-elected vice-president of the Canadian Real Estate Association.

Ross is chairman of a CREA committee preparing the real estate industry's response to amendments to the Combines Investigation Act, which will require service industries to have free-floating fees and commissions.

The real estate industry will move to a system of having the salesman negotiate a commission fee with the vendor, the person owning the property. These commissions under the Multiple Listing Service have varied from city to city but have usually been in the range of from 5 to 7 per cent.

For example, Vancouver firms charge 7 per cent while in Ottawa the rate is 5.5 per cent.

All real estate boards in Canada will soon receive guidelines from Ross's committee outlining procedures for negotiating commission fees.

"In practice, the rates will not change very much," Ross said. "Real estate companies will still have to be able to recovered their costs."

For example, Victoria has already gone to the negotiated commission fee and the floating, rate is running in the range of 5 to 6 per cent. The fixed MLS commission rate had been 6.5 per cent for the first $30,000 of a sale and a lower rate for the balance. This could average 6.2 per cent or 6 per cent, depending on the dollar value of the sale.

Now the commission rate is determined by direct negotiation between the vendor and the salesman but is not much different than the previous fixed rates.

Conditions vary from firm to firm but it would be difficult to handle a sale with a commission rate below 5 per cent, taking into consideration the advertising and office expenses and other costs of car-

Oil Stocks Rise, Others Mixed

Volume by 2 p.m. was 1.01 million shares, compared with one million at the same time Thursday. Losses outnumbered gains 164 to 142 with 213 issues unchanged.

Sundance Would Get A-Plus—If It Gave Grades

By KIT COLLINS
Times Staff

The traditional system of grading student progress with an A, B, C, or D, just doesn't apply to the 116 students at Sundance less-structured school, principal George Olsson said today.

"The success of each child attending the school is individually defined," said Olsson.

"We put that in our advertisements when the school started up and we wouldn't be keeping our commitment if it wasn't so."

Olsson was commenting on the Greater Victoria school board's evaluation of the alternative school during its first three years and he said he is pleased with it because "it was a real attempt to be fair."

The team, headed by Glenn Wall, board assistant superintendent in charge of instruction, said the school met objectives, but the team said inadequate records on students makes it difficult to judge student progress.

Stated goal at the school's inception three years ago was the following: Individual evaluation of progress is based on individualized criteria agreed to by the child, the parent and the teacher. So all three know exactly where they stand even if the onlooker is confused.

"I know what the 23 kids in my family (student grouping) are learning," said Olsson, "and I'm extremely aware of what they don't know, what they do know and what they need to know.

"Sundance shouldn't be judged in light of what a conventional school should be," he said.

An alternative school is something different, he said. It can't be compared with the regular system because the comparison would do either one or the other a disservice.

"We'd be pulling a massive con-job if we accepted students from as far away as the end of 10-Mile Point and they got the same thing as they could get in the regular school system."

Eventually, said Olsson, we will come to some sort of checklisting system, but it has to evolve.

"We're extremely afraid that one child would be compared to another in a grading system, when one of the basic goals of the school is to treat kids as equals."

High point in the report, as far as Olsson is concerned, was the conclusion that Sundance is significantly different from alternative schools . . . "Because it means Sundance has succeeded. We were instructed by the board to be different, and it means we're doing what we were supposed to have been doing."

School parent Dan Blower agrees with the report that there could be a little more emphasis on progress reports.

Students don't necessarily have to be all pegged on the same scale, but parents could get some type of report on their child as an individual.

It would assist parents who aren't actively involved with the school and "give just a little more background for a child who is transferring to a structured system," Blower said.

Another parent, Penny Perry, however said she's not at all unhappy with the system as it is now.

She feels the evaluation team pointed out a lack of record-keeping because "traditionally that's how it's used to judging student progress."

Parents consult with the teacher and child and it's a satisfactory verbal contract, she said.

Besides, there seems to be no problem in the case of a student who transfers to the regular system.

One child transferred to the regular system in September, "and she's on top of it all. She had no problem making the transition, and she's in the top three of her class without the benefit of tests or records," said Mrs. Perry.

Record Blood Donor Turnout

Red Cross spokesman Jerry Savage said today that credit goes to volunteers from the Provincial Ambulance Service, who canvassed apartments before this week's blood drive and who promoted the clinic with an ambulance display in the mall.

He also paid tribute to members of the Victoria Real Estate Board whose "great personal effort" boosted the clinic Thursday.

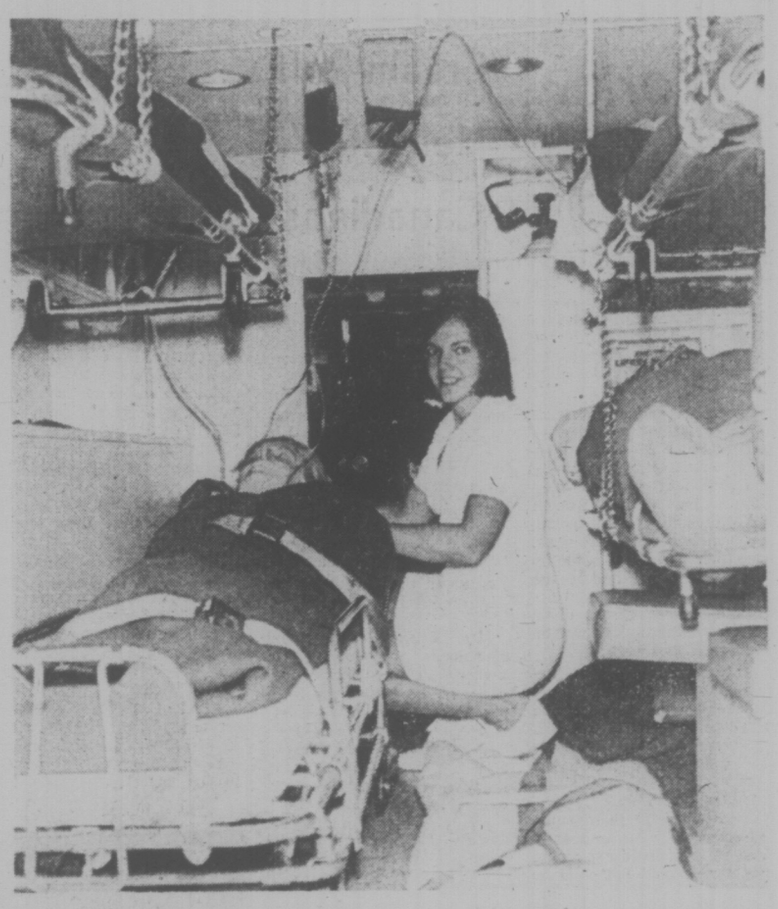
Savage said Thursday's turnout brings the total of donors this month to 1,724 and virtually assures that for the first time in many years donors in Greater Victoria will match the amount of blood used by the communitys' hospitals this year.

Donors total 10,691 so far this year and Savage has calculated local hospitals will use 12,000 units of blood by the year-end.

The last of this month's clinics will be held at the Royal Jubilee Hospital nurses' residence today, from 9:30 a.m. to noon and 1:15 p.m. to 4:30 p.m.



VOLUNTEERS who manned prototype ambulance of the Provincial Ambulance Service to promote blood clinic at Hillside Mall Thursday used mannequin as display patient, tended here by Helen Wood of the Red Cross. But attendants were also called upon to work in earnest when woman suffered apparent heart attack just outside mall and was treated before being taken to Royal Jubilee Hospital. Truckers' Hackles Up Over Ferries Edict

Times Staff

A stick-to-the-rules edict of the B.C. Ferries system is raising the hackles of trucking companies using the Swartz Bay-Tsawwassen ferry runs.

Tempers have flared at the Swartz Bay terminal as truck drivers are forced to wait several hours before boarding ferries.

On Thursday, some of them stormed into the terminal office to voice their objections, and "fisticuff situations" developed between drivers and terminal workers.

A B.C. Ferries spokesman explained today that the cause of the problem is an order put into effect on Monday.

"We've always had a policy on commercial traffic and vehicles over six feet six inches in height," the official explained. "If they are in the terminal 30 minutes before a scheduled sailing they have a loading priority on up to one third of a ferry's capacity — 1,000 feet of deck space.

"But in the past some of our boys have been a little generous. Now, with the winter schedule, we have given orders that the rules must be applied."

He explained that a trucker could miss several sailings if he arrived before the 30-minute deadline but there was overheight traffic ahead of him that would fill two or more sailings, based on the one-third of deck space ruling.

Compounding the problem at this time is the racing season at Sandown and hunters.

"We're trying to reduce the Sandown traffic by plugging that people use buses," he said. "But there have been hundreds using cars.

"Also, there's relatively good hunting and we've had a hell of a lot of hunters (using the ferries), most of them using campers."

Some of the congestion, he said, will be eased by the additional two sailings that will be put on during the mornings, an 8 a.m. one from Tsawwassen and a 10 a.m. run from Swartz Bay.

He admitted the ferry system is receiving "a lot of flack" from trucking companies but suggested that these companies should consider alternative means of transporting goods between the mainland and Vancouver Island.

"We've been asking people to look at the CP Rail service which has the Carrier Princess running from Swartz Bay to downtown Vancouver," he said, "People should take a careful look at all transportation and use the best possible means."

Based on a U.S. survey, he added, it has been proven that it costs 24 cents a mile for highway traffic, compared to the 20 cents a mile if ferries are used.

A provincial government source said the additional sailings will be monitored and the sailings withdrawn if and when it appeared the traffic does not warrant them. Basis for the original 1975 winter schedule, excluding the two new runs, was 1974 traffic figures.

Gov't Criticizes Capital Region Hospital Site

The provincial government is "not completely happy" with the new hospital site chosen by the Capital region, associate deputy health minister John Glenwright said Thursday.

"We're not as encouraged about the site as they are," Glenwright said.

The site, at the corner of MacKenzie Avenue and Pat Bay Highway, has a $2.5 million price tag on it, said Glenwright, and the government is concerned about the high cost.

The Regional Hospital and Health Planning Commission recommended the site two months ago and said it meets all the requirements for location.

Glenwright said the government is looking at two alternative sites but would not say where they were.

Earlier this week, regional administrator John Clark said the province is holding up development of the new hospital by its tardiness in approving the site.

The proposed hospital will have at least 400 beds and will be 60 per cent financed by the government. It is intended to serve Saanich and the western communities of Colwood, Langford and Metchosin.

Meanwhile, Health Minister Dennis Cocke said Thursday he has deferred a decision on a new hospital for northern Vancouver Island pending clarification of population trends.

A hospital has been proposed for the Regional District of Mount Waddington with Port Hardy and Port McNeill as the most central locations.

While waiting for the population trends to emerge, Cocke said, he would authorize improvements for the existing Port Hardy hospital and the building of a diagnostic treatment centre at Port McNeill.

Public Backs Us: Police

Victoria policemen have the general support of the community in their dispute with the city over wages, because citizens are concerned that they receive adequate protection and law enforcement, an arbitration hearing was told this morning.

Sgt. Patrick Braiden, president of the Victoria Policemen's Union, said during the protracted argument with city hall over the union's wage demands, he has received many letters and calls for support from the public.

"People are very concerned about adequate policing," he told arbitrator Guy Barclay on the second day of the hearing at Empress Hotel.

"One lady phoned me up and said 'I don't care what it costs, but I do want to see a policeman walking down Douglas Street again; I haven't seen one for years'."

Braiden earlier drew attention to the thin cover of police protection necessitated by manpower shortage which leaves the city exposed from time to time, affecting efficiency and morale.

Braiden claimed the public is "not the least bit hesitant" to pay higher wages to its police officers for better policing. Citizens realized that to do otherwise would be a false economy.

He and Dermod Owen-Flood, counsel for the police union, pointed out that the Victoria Chamber of Commerce and the Downtown Business Association have come out in support of policemen and feel they should be paid at least as much as their Saanich counterparts.

Vancouver lawyer Jack Giles, who is representing the city, said: "We won't dispute the proposition that politicians like to get re-elected. To a large extent that governs the policies which they formulate."

Retorted Owen-Flood: "That is precisely what we are trying to tell you."

The police union is seeking parity with Saanich, where under a recent settlement a first class constable with three years' service receives $16,200 annual salary. Giles, in cross-examining Braiden, claimed the Saanich settlement itself was "grossly, outrageously irresponsible," because in one step it placed Saanich policemen on a par with police in large metropolitan areas like Vancouver, Toronto, Montreal and Hamilton.

(It was agreed that Vancouver leads the field with a $16,512 salary for a first-class constable, followed by Hamilton $16,396; Montreal $16,273, and Toronto $16,260.)

Giles asked whether policemen in those centres would not have "every reason to be unsatisfied" with the fact that they are receiving amounts substantially the same as officers in largely rural Saanich, but Braiden replied the chief factor to consider is the work load — "the amount of work each man has to do in each community. It should be equal work for equal pay."

Saanich lsst year hired 15 additional policemen.

In testimony which occupied the entire first day of the hearing, Thursday, union president Sgt. Patrick Braiden referred point by point to the lengthy list of proposals first submitted to the city 10 months ago as the basis for negotiations.

He claimed the police department suffers from a "chronic shortage" of staff, and has done for several years, a situation which affects both the efficiency of the force and the morale of police officers.

This manpower deficiency — an average of 7.6 men for the past five years — creates an unnecessary amount of overtime, he said.

But although, in theory at least, the men have the option of taking overtime in cash or time off in lieu, "we are usually paid off rather than being given the opportunity to have time off," because there is simply too much work for too few men.

"It's not unusual to have one (patrol) car covering the whole city of Victoria at one time," Braiden said. "These are the things that seem to affect morale."

Too few traffic offenders are apprehended because the officers are occupied with more important taks, he told the arbitrator.

It is becoming increasingly difficult for city policemen to look forward to their two days off eqch week, because they know they are "subject to recall" to testify at court cases.

Hot Line Humming With Price Beefs

The Victoria anti-inflation hotline has received more than 20 complaints of price increases during the past four days — with hikes ranging from seven per cent to almost 100 per cent.

All prices have been frozen since Oct. 13, except to pass along cost increases.

One Victoria resident phoned the Revenue Canada hotline to report his home insurance premium had risen about 100 per cent.

At the other end of the scale, a Victorian complained about a seven per cent increase in the price of walnuts in the shell.

All complaints are being forwarded to Ottawa for action by the anti-inflation board.

One of the first complaints was a protest against an increase in the price of coal since Thanksgiving Day. A Victoria coal merchant later phoned in to explain that he was simply passing along an increase due to higher freight rates. He then lodged a formal complaint about the freight rate increase.

The complaint department can be reached by phoning 388-3551 Monday to Friday between 8:15 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. A toll-free number, Zenith 0-4000, is available for Vancouver Island residents phoning Victoria.

Revenue Canada spokesman Robert Chapman said callers should be prepared to identify themselves and the company they are complaining about. The caller's name will be kept confidential.

"It is helpful if the caller knows what the price was before Thanksgiving Day," Chapman said.

"One caller asked a merchant the reason for the price increase, and this information was very helpful."

The price at issue involved a popular cough medicine that had risen to about $5 a bottle from $3. The druggist said the increase was due to an increase in the price of codeine. The caller doubted that the 66 per cent increase was justified because codeine made up only about one per cent of all the ingredients in the medicine. The information has been passed along to Ottawa.

Other complaints received this week include:

The price of tropical plants up 100 per cent since May.

Prescription ointment up nine per cent since September.

Propane gas up 15 per cent.

Flour up 10 per cent.

There were three separate complaints about beer parlor price increases to 40 cents a glass from 35 cents.

Grape juice up 30 per cent.

One brand of soap up 40 per cent.

There were three separate complaints about bread price increases of about three cents a loaf.

Bacon prices were reported to be up 10 per cent. Food prices can rise if they reflect higher prices paid to producers.

Somebody Up There Must Be Laughing

ONE DAY WHEN SUMMER was on the land, I looked up at our newly-repaired roof and offered one of those fat-head predictions that set the gods snickering.

"There," I said. "We shouldn't have any more trouble with that!"

Summer passed. The rainy season arrived. This morning I sat down to my typewriter and fed it a wad of paper.

My first two-fingered assault on the keys was answered by a splash. I peered up at the ceiling and saw a pie-sized wet patch.

My point isn't that a rain-laden southeaster should dislodge a shingle. Elderly roofs can and do leak. But it occured to me while mopping up my flooded machine that something more than coincidence had positioned the leak where it would cause maximum confusion. Someone up there must be laughing.

As an optimist, I like to believe that the wind is tempered to the shorn lamb.

Still, even an optimist can have his moments of pessimism, and in mine I occasionally become aware of a phenomenon that asserts itself when man least expects it.

Call it the laughter of the gods.

A friend of mine heard it distinctly in the lobby of a crowded hotel where he'd just learned that his reservation wasn't effective until later that week. He'd laid out his trip schedule with meticulous care from a pocketbook calendar a year outdated.

Another friend must have caught at least a chuckle when he gazed at the 64-pound tyee salmon landed by the neophyte whom he'd coached in the art of mooching.

"I did just what you told me," said the lucky fisherman as he displayed his catch. "Put my boat in at Ken Forde's ramp, ran out past the edge of the kelp, and bumped a Deadly Dick off the bottom. I reeled it up a couple of feet like you said, and Wham!"

Then he added the stinger. "Too bad you had to work in your garden."

The fellow who elected to work in his garden was sure in his private mind that the fishing wouldn't be worth a hoot.

The driver who boasts that his car hasn't demanded so much as a new fuel pump in 90,000 miles is asking for the expensive lunkity-klunk of a broken connecting rod.

This isn't to suggest that a proper spirit of humility is insurance against unwelcome attention from the powers that sit in judgment on our affairs.

I can remember no man less inclined to court the divine laughter than a surveyor whose attitude toward the black bears of our Island woods was nothing if not respectful.

"No point in crowding your luck," he counselled me as we began a wide detour around a valley elbow where we'd spotted a half-pint blackie foraging for grubs.

This prudent observation delivered, he barged his way through an ocean spray clump that harbored a hornet's nest. He wound up plastering his stings with wet mud in a creekbed.

It's possible, of course, that the laughter of the gods may sometimes be of benevolent intent.

The supposedly trouble-proof car that popped a rod was revealed by garage diagnosis to be dangerously loose in the steering assembly.

It's even possible that the flooding of my typewriter, which is still a trifle damp, may be more than a piece of Olympian whimsy.

Could someone up there be trying to tell me something?

Q. What was the original estimated cost of the 1976 Olympics? How much have we gone over the estimated cost? Did Munich lose money with their Olympics, and if so how much? — L.D. and E.F.

A. Our file on this subject has so many different figures it looks like the European Health Spa. But the original 1976 construction estimate appears to have been $250 million plus $60 million for administration on revenue of $310 millions. The budget has since risen to $633 million, then $714 million, including construction costs of $580 million and administration of $73 million on revenue of $450 million. That would leave a deficit of $264 million, but this figure has since been revised to $320 million. A year from now, when the games are over, there may be a more accurate accounting. Munich games are variously reported to have cost $600 million — $1 billion with a deficit of $262 million.

ALERT DECLARED IN PORTUGAL

LISBON, Portugal (UPI) — The government declared a nationwide military alert today and began issuing ammunition, grenades and combat food rations to loyal troops in Oporto in face of a right-wing bomb campaign and rumors of an impending coup by the far left.

The nation also was hit by a wave of bombing directed chiefly against left-wing naval officers. By late afternoon there had been nine bomb explosions and key military commanders were summoned to Lisbon to discuss the series of crises.

"The situation here is very tense," one officer reported from Oporto where the government sent armored cars to strategic points of the city and to an army barracks where rebellious soldiers called an anti-government demonstration in defiance of military leaders.

The security precautions in Oporto were taken after the region's military commander, Brig. Antonio Pires Veloso, said he would halt any attempt by the rebellious soldiers to gather at a key artillery base on the outskirts of the city.

Leftists reacted to Veloso's decision by calling their militants for a protest demonstration. The far left urged their militants to leave their jobs and go to the artillery base where the rebel soldiers were holding their meeting.

"Portugal will be very lucky if it survives this weekend without serious trouble," one politician said.

On Thursday night, only 15,000 leftists turned out in answer to Communist calls for a demonstration that some observers expected would be the prelude to an attempt to overthrow the moderate-leftist government.

TUBE STORMED

MONTREAL (CP) — More than 12,000 people marched on city hall while hundreds of others stormed downtown subway stations Thursday to protest recent transit fare increases.

Police spokesmen said the protest was peaceful although a few of the demonstrators, mostly university and junior college students, broke windows at city hall and at one subway station.

Hundreds of students at the station also leaped over turnstiles.

Second Turk Envoy Shot

PARIS (UPI)—Turkish ambassador Ismail Erez and his chauffeur were killed today in the heart of Paris when unknown terrorists machinegunned the envoy's car, police said.

Erez was the second Turkish ambassador murdered within a week. Three gunmen invaded the Turkish embassy in Vienna Wednesday, shot the ambassador to death and fled.

No motive for the slaying of ambassador Danis Tunaligil in Vienna was ever established, but authorities said the slaying was carried out by three swarthy men they described as southern Europeans.

There was some speculation the Turks were slain as result of the Turko-Greek crisis over Cyprus, but police could not confirm this other than saying the killings could have been politically inspired.

Police said two or three men opened fire on the limousine carrying Ambassador Erez on Quai John F. Kennedy, near the Bir Hakeim bridge over the Seine river.

Witnesses said two or three men stepped down from the sidewalk into the slow-moving heavy traffic along the Seine embankment when the Turkish embassy limousine approached.

Police said the men whipped submachine guns from under their coats and opened fire. Submachine guns also were used in the Vienna slaying.

In Ankara, an emergency meeting of the Turkish cabinet was called after news of the Paris slaying was received.

OIL-SOAKED DUCK, a victim of the sudden spill of about 52,000 gallons of oil from an Imperial Oil refinery into the Red River at Winnipeg, is held by 11-year-old Pam Gray. Officials said today they believe emergency measures were successful in containing the oil.

Postal Workers Seek Return to Bargaining

Times News Services

Negotiators for inside postal workers delivered notice to Postmaster-General Bryce Mackasey in Ottawa late Thursday asking for a resumption of contract negotiations in an attempt to end their strike, now in its fourth day.

Jean-Claude Parrot, chief negotiator for the Canadian Union of Postal Workers, said talks could resume when Mackasey lifted an ultimatum that the union accept the government's wage offer before other issues are discussed.

The letter, delivered Thursday night by private courier to the minister's office, says the union bargaining team is prepared to return to negotiations within two hours of a call by Mackasey.

Before his collapse, Mackasey told the Commons that he will reply later today.

The government "will be ready to put a package together to put before union negotiators after we have had a chance to analyze the letter," he said.

Mackasey added in the House that some of the 22,000 workers have asked for permission to return to work and the post office has granted that permission.

Inside postal workers represented by some New Brunswick and Newfoundland locals are among those willing to work, he added.

As the postmaster-general spoke in the House, about 50 demonstrators marched before the Parliament Buildings urging an end to the strike.

An official of CUPW, taking pictures of the demonstrators, said most appeared to be union members who work part-time.

The official, shop steward Gus Meinert of the 1,200-member Ottawa local, said he was "taking pictures of our members that we want to talk to afterwards" but they were perfectly free to demonstrate as they wished.

Mackasey paid a brief visit to the marchers before entering the Commons and one marcher asked him: "When are you going to investigate that union?"

Mackasey replied: "It is more important that you people clean out your own leadership . . ."

The marcher asked "what about those goon squads?" He referred apparently to reports of violence in Vancouver and Montreal.

"They are the biggest cowards in the world," said Mackasey.

"They always are — if you people stand up to them they'll run away."

In Vancouver, Gerald Boyko and Brian Nelson, members of the union, were charged with common assault Thursday after two post office employees said they were prevented from crossing a picket line.

Ten-Mile Point Marine Reserve

The first marine ecological reserves in B.C. have been established in local waters.

Twenty-seven acres of sea bed at the end of Ten-Mile Point and one square nautical mile on the floor of Satellite Channel have been formed into reserves by the provincial government.

Resource Minister Bob Williams said both the channel reserve lying between Salt Spring Island and North Saanich and the Ten-Mile Point reserve are exceptionally rich in marine life and have a long history of use by scientists at the University of Victoria.

"By setting aside these marine ecological reserves, we do not intend to interfere with navigation or sports fishing," said Williams.

Williams said he hopes the new reserves will encourage UVic to continue its research programs and he asked the public to avoid disturbing those areas and to report any damage noticed.

The government also extended the Baeria Islets ecological reserve in Barclay Sound to include marine contours up to a 20-fathom contour.

The area is particularly rich in west coast marine life, said Williams.

Iceland Women Strike

REYKJAVIK (Reuter) — THE WOMEN OF Iceland went on strike today, leaving their menfolk wondering how to run the country without them.

Housewives, women teachers, clerks, industrial workers and even nursemaids all over the island said they were taking the day off, bringing tiny Iceland almost to a standstill.

The militant women — there are about 60,000 of them over the age of 19, said latest census figures — staged their token stoppage to prove just how indispensable they are.

And the men, who treated all the strike threats as a huge joke, began to get the point.

Most shops planned to stay closed for the day, telephone exchanges were left unattended and even radio and television broadcasts were expected to be blacked out because the women refused to take part in the programs.

The government, determined to keep the affairs of state going despite the walkout, said it was impossible to conduct official business by telephone.

The banks had the same problem, although they tried to stay in operation by sending department heads to the counters to replace missing female cashiers.

Spokeswoman Gerdu Steipthorsdottir said the walkout was to show "how indespensable we are in our country's economy and national life.

She added: "We are not demanding any special wage increase. We are only showing that it is a great injustice that women receive lower wages."

Back Taxes Proposed

Logging firms should have to pay heavy penalties for turning Gulf Island tree farms into housing subdivisions, Dave Brousson, a director of Islands Trust, said today.

The companies originally were given major tax benefits when they declared the land Certified Tree Farms and have continued enjoying tax benefits from the special status. The companies should have to pay the foregone taxes when they turn the land to other use, he told the Royal Commission on Forest Resources.

He explained that originally logging companies requested CTF status so that they could reduce property tax and keep the land in tree production.

"Since the owner of the land entered the program knowing that such benefits would accrue over the longer term, it seems equitable to recover taxes foregone if he withdraws from the program."

He added since 1974, the land owners enjoy even greater benefit due to the dramatic increase in the assessment of non-residential land.

The penalty tax assessed should directly be related to the length of time the land has been a tree farm, and at least equal to the compound value of the difference between the taxes paid under the tree-farm certificate, he said.

Brousson said if logging companies were allowed to subdivide their land it would have major impact on some islands.

As an example, he pointed out MacMillan Bloedel in 1972 announced a plan to create up to about 2,700 small lots on a portion of their tree-farm land on Galiano Island.

This would have meant the population on the island, now 500, would have increased 15-fold to over 7,000, he said.

"Such a tremendous increase in population would have completely overwhelmed and altered the existing community," he said. "It was only after a very loud public outcry that the plan was abandoned."

B.C. Response Today To Ottawa Controls

The provincial cabinet met in special session today and Premier Barrett promised a statement late this afternoon on B.C.'s response to wage and price controls.

Visiting Victoria today, Sen. Ray Perrault said if any province refuses to follow the federal wage and price guidelines the whole program will collapse.

Cabinet was to hear a report from Finance Minister Dave Stupich on the two-day federal-provincial talks in Ottawa on the federal anti-inflation program.

And a key item to be discussed was a legal report on the constitutionality of separate provincial price controls.

It's expected the cabinet will discuss the possibility of bringing in its own price restraints on food and other basic commodities.

Barrett said he would have a full statement to make about 5 p.m. and there is a possibility he will go on television live this evening.

Stupich said Thursday he would recommend to cabinet that B.C. support the federal government's proposed wage and price controls, but his recommendation would have some reservations.

He is not totally satisifed with the federal plan, said Stupich, but he is convinced Ottawa really wants the plan to work.

Perrault government leader in the Senate, said in an interview the guidelines got a big boost when Ontario agreed in principle to support the program but there would have to be unanimous agreement or the program would fail.

Provincial governments have control over provincial civil servants, municipal employees and various professional groups.

He said Ottawa has asked for provincial co-operation but may have to go beyond asking to make the program work. He said it was not clear what the government would do but noted that Ottawa had wide powers under the income tax act to direct the activities of both workers and companies.

(Prime Minister Trudeau has said the government may impose a tax surcharge to take back any pay increase above the guidelines.)

Perrault said Ottawa hopes to be able to dismantle the wage and price guidelines before the three-year program has been completed.

However, rather than removing the program, Ottawa might have to make it tougher if the present program did not work, he said.

A tougher program would bring more sections of the economy under the regulations but would not go so far as a total freeze, he said. Workers would have to get raises high enough to keep up with the increases in the cost of living.

Meanwhile in Ottawa the anti-inflation bill hit a snag in the Commons Thursday when an all-party agreement to speed second reading fell apart.

Government House leader, Mitchell Sharp said Thursday afternoon there was "a reasonable expectation, if not a certainty" that the bill would be given second-reading during the day and referred to the House finance committee for detailed study.

He told MPs he based his assessment on consultations with opposition House leaders, a routine practice in manoeuvring bills through various stages of parliamentary passage.

TEENAGERS HURT BY BOMB ON LAWN

Niko Burtini, 16, and his girl friend Wendy Warner, were injured when a bomb-like device went off at the Burtini home, 3061 East 23rd. The explosion was heard six blocks away. It left a hole in the front lawn, took a piece out of the concrete front steps and shattered a picture window in the home. It also shattered the side window of a car parked nearby and put a hole in a neighbor's window.

Police were uncertain whether the explosion was caused by a home-made device made up as a Halloween prank or was intended to cause damage.

They were investigating the possibilities that the device was thrown from a passing car or had been placed on the lawn with some sort of timing device.

The youth was injured in the leg and his girlfriend was hit in the body by flying debris.

Fixed Commissions Ending for Real Estate

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

The day of the fixed commission for real estate sales is ending but this does not mean there will be a price war to attract business, says Norman Ross of Victoria, newly-elected vice-president of the Canadian Real Estate Association.

Ross is chairman of a CREA committee preparing the real estate industry's response to amendments to the Combines Investigation Act, which will require service industries to have free-floating fees and commissions.

The real estate industry will move to a system of having the salesman negotiate a commission fee with the vendor, the person owning the property. These commissions under the Multiple Listing Service have varied from city to city but have usually been in the range of from 5 to 7 per cent.

For example, Vancouver firms charge 7 per cent while in Ottawa the rate is 5.5 per cent.

All real estate boards in Canada will soon receive guidelines from Ross's committee outlining procedures for negotiating commission fees.

"In practice, the rates will not change very much," Ross said. "Real estate companies will still have to be able to recover their costs."

For example, Victoria has already gone to the negotiated commission fee and the floating rate is running in the range of 5 to 6 per cent. The fixed MLS commission rate had been 6.5 per cent for the first $30,000 of a sale and a lower rate for the balance. This could average 6.2 per cent or 6 per cent, depending on the dollar value of the sale.

Now the commission rate is determined by direct negotiation between the vendor and the salesman but is not much different than the previous fixed rates.

Conditions vary from firm to firm but it would be difficult to handle a sale with a commission rate below 5 per cent, taking into consideration the advertising and office expenses and other costs of car-

Sundance Would Get A-Plus—If It Gave Grades

By KIT COLLINS
Times Staff

The traditional system of grading student progress with an A, B, C, or D, just doesn't apply to the 116 students at Sundance less-structured school, principal George Olsson said today.

"The success of each child attending the school is individually defined," said Olsson.

"We put that in our advertisements when the school started up and we wouldn't be keeping our commitment if it wasn't so."

Olsson was commenting on the Greater Victoria school board's evaluation of the alternative school during its first three years and he said he is pleased with it because "it was a real attempt to be fair."

The team, headed by Glenn Wall, board assistant superintendent in charge of instruction, said the school met objectives, but the team said inadequate records on students makes it difficult to judge student progress.

Stated goal at the school's inception three years ago was the following: Individual evaluation of progress is based on individualized criteria agreed to by the child, the parent and the teacher. So all three know exactly where they stand even if the onlooker is confused.

"I know what the 23 kids in my family (student grouping) are learning," said Olsson, "and I'm extremely aware of what they don't know, what they do know and what they need to know.

"Sundance shouldn't be judged in light of what a conventional school should be," he said.

An alternative school is something different, he said. It can't be compared with the regular system because the comparison would do either one or the other a disservice.

"We'd be pulling a massive con-job if we accepted students from as far away as the end of 10-Mile Point and they got the same thing as they could get in the regular school system."

Eventually, said Olsson, we will come to some sort of checklisting system, but it has to evolve.

"We're extremely afraid that one child would be compared to another in a grading system, when one of the basic goals of the school is to treat kids as equals."

High point in the report, as far as Olsson is concerned, was the conclusion that Sundance is significantly different from schools . . . "Because it means Sundance has succeeded. We were instructed by the board to be different, and it means we're doing what we were supposed to have been doing."

School parent Dan Blower agrees with the report that there could be a little more emphasis on progress reports.

Students don't necessarily have to be all pegged on the same scale, but parents could get some type of report on their child as an individual.

It would assist parents who aren't actively involved with the school and "give just a little more background for a child who is transferring to a structured system," Blower said.

Another parent, Penny Perry, however said she's not at all unhappy with the system as it is now.

She feels the evaluation team pointed out a lack of record-keeping because "traditionally that's how it's used to judging student progress."

Parents consult with the teacher and child and it's a satisfactory verbal contract, she said.

Besides, there seems to be no problem in the case of a student who transfers to the regular system.

One child transferred to the regular system in September, "and she's on top of it all. She had no problem making the transition, and she's in the top three of her class without the benefit of tests or records," said Mrs. Perry.

Record Blood Donor Turnout

Red Cross spokesman Jerry Savage said today that credit goes to volunteers from the Provincial Ambulance Service, who canvassed apartments before this week's blood drive and who promoted the clinic with an ambulance display in the mall.

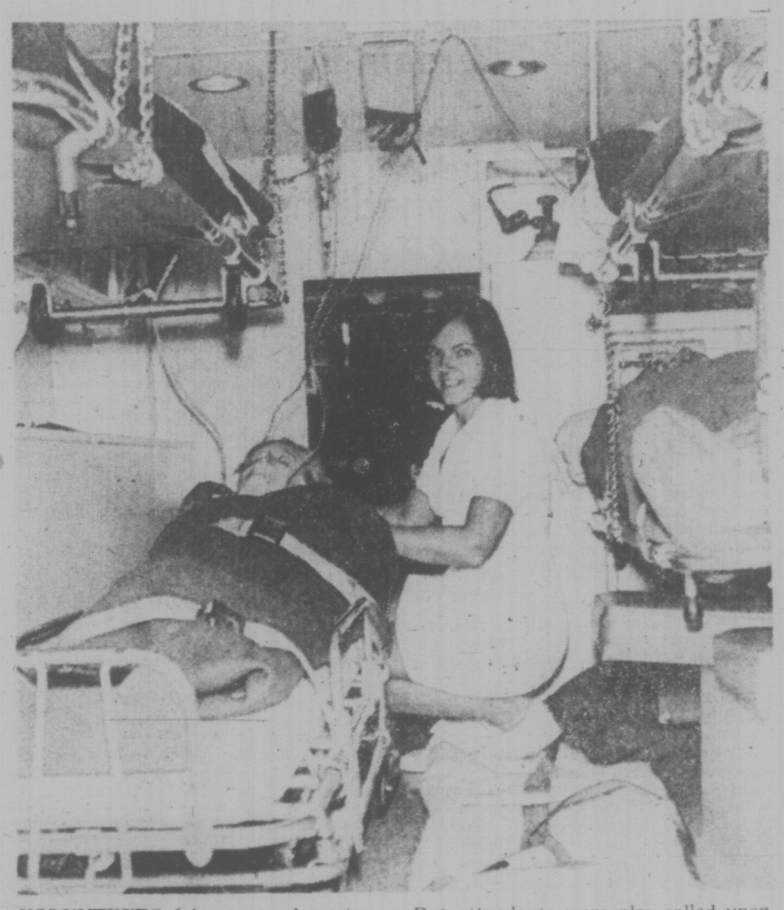
Savage said Thursday's turnout brings the total of donors this month to 1,724 and virtually assures that for the first time in many years donors in Greater Victoria will match the amount of blood used by the communitys' hospitals this year.

Donors total 10,691 so far this year and Savage has calculated local hospitals will use 12,000 units of blood by the year-end.

The last of this month's clinics will be held at the Royal Jubilee Hospital nurses' residence today, from 9:30 a.m. to noon and 1:15 p.m. to 4:30 p.m.



VOLUNTEERS who manned prototype ambulance of the Provincial Ambulance Service to promote blood clinic at Hillside Mall Thursday used mannequin as display patient, tended here by Helen Wood of the Red Cross. But attendants were also called upon to work in earnest when woman suffered apparent heart attack just outside mall and was treated before being taken to Royal Jubilee Hospital. Truckers' Hackles Up Over Ferries Edict

Times Staff

A stick-to-the-rules edict of the B.C. Ferries system is raising the hackles of trucking companies using the Swartz Bay-Tsawwassen ferry runs.

Tempers have flared at the Swartz Bay terminal as truck drivers are forced to wait several hours before boarding ferries.

On Thursday, some of them stormed into the terminal office to voice their objections, and "fisticuff situations" developed between drivers and terminal workers.

"We've always had a policy on commercial traffic and vehicles over six feet six inches in height," the official explained. "If they are in the terminal 30 minutes before a scheduled sailing they have a loading priority on up to one third of a ferry's capacity — 1,000 feet of deck space.

"But in the past some of our boys have been a little generous. Now, with the winter schedule, we have given orders that the rules must be applied."

He explained that a trucker could miss several sailings if he arrived before the 30-minute deadline but there was overheight traffic ahead of him that would fill two or more sailings, based on the one-third of deck space ruling.

Compounding the problem at this time is the racing season at Sandown and hunters.

"We're trying to reduce the Sandown traffic by plugging that people use buses," he said. "But there have been hundreds using cars.

"Also, there's relatively good hunting and we've had a hell of a lot of hunters (using the ferries), most of them using campers."

Some of the congestion, he said, will be eased by the additional two sailings that will be put on during the mornings, an 8 a.m. one from Tsawwassen and a 10 a.m. run from Swartz Bay.

He admitted the ferry system is receiving "a lot of flack" from trucking companies but suggested that these companies should consider alternative means of transporting goods between the mainland and Vancouver Island.

"We've been asking people to look at the CP Rail service which has the Carrier Princess running from Swartz Bay to downtown Vancouver," he said, "People should take a careful look at all transportation and use the best possible means."

Based on a U.S. survey, he added, it has been proven that it costs 24 cents a mile for highway traffic, compared to the 20 cents a mile if ferries are used.

A provincial government source said the additional sailings will be monitored and the sailings withdrawn if and when it appeared the traffic does not warrant them. Basis for the original 1975 winter schedule, excluding the two new runs, was 1974 traffic figures.

Gov't Criticizes Capital Region Hospital Site

The provincial government is "not completely happy" with the new hospital site chosen by the Capital region, associate deputy health minister John Glenwright said Thursday.

"We're not as encouraged about the site as they are," Glenwright said.

The site, at the corner of MacKenzie Avenue and Pat Bay Highway, has a $2.5 million price tag on it, said Glenwright, and the government is concerned about the high cost.

The Regional Hospital and Health Planning Commission recommended the site two months ago and said it meets all the requirements for location.

Glenwright said the government is looking at two alternative sites but would not say where they were.

Earlier this week, regional administrator John Clark said the province is holding up development of the new hospital by its tardiness in approving the site.

The proposed hospital will have at least 400 beds and will be 60 per cent financed by the government. It is intended to serve Saanich and the western communities of Colwood, Langford and Metchosin.

Meanwhile, Health Minister Dennis Cocke said Thursday he has deferred a decision on a new hospital for northern Vancouver Island pending clarification of population trends.

While waiting for the population trends to emerge, Cocke said, he would authorize improvements for the existing Port Hardy hospital and the building of a diagnostic treatment centre at Port McNeill.

Public Backs Us: Police

Victoria policemen have the general support of the community in their dispute with the city over wages, because citizens are concerned that they receive adequate protection and law enforcement, an arbitration hearing was told this morning.

Sgt. Patrick Braiden, president of the Victoria Policemen's Union, said during the protracted argument with city hall over the union's wage demands, he has received many letters and calls for support from the public.

"People are very concerned about adequate policing," he told arbitrator Guy Barclay on the second day of the hearing at Empress Hotel.

"One lady phoned me up and said 'I don't care what it costs, but I do want to see a policeman walking down Douglas Street again; I haven't seen one for years'."

Braiden earlier drew attention to the thin cover of police protection necessitated by manpower shortage which leaves the city exposed from time to time, affecting efficiency and morale.

Braiden claimed the public is "not the least bit hesitant" to pay higher wages to its police officers for better policing. Citizens realized that to do otherwise would be a false economy.

He and Dermod Owen-Flood, counsel for the police union, pointed out that the Victoria Chamber of Commerce and the Downtown Business Association have come out in support of policemen and feel they should be paid at least as much as their Saanich counterparts.

Vancouver lawyer Jack Giles, who is representing the city, said: "We won't dispute the proposition that politicians like to get re-elected. To a large extent that governs the policies which they formulate."

The police union is seeking parity with Saanich, where under a recent settlement a first class constable with three years' service receives $16,200 annual salary. Giles, in cross-examining Braiden, claimed the Saanich settlement itself was "grossly, outrageously irresponsible," because in one step it placed Saanich policemen on a par with police in large metropolitan areas like Vancouver, Toronto, Montreal and Hamilton.

(It was agreed that Vancouver leads the field with a $16,512 salary for a first-class constable, followed by Hamilton $16,396; Montreal $16,273, and Toronto $16,260.)

Giles asked whether policemen in those centres would not have "every reason to be dissatisfied" with the fact that they are receiving amounts substantially the same as officers in largely rural Saanich, but Braiden replied the chief factor to consider is the work load — "the amount of work each man has to do in each community. It should be equal work for equal pay."

Saanich last year hired 15 additional policemen.

In testimony which occupied the entire first day of the hearing, Thursday, Braiden referred point by point to the lengthy list of proposals first submitted to the city 10 months ago as the basis for negotiations.

He claimed the police department suffers from a "chronic shortage" of staff, and has done for several years, a situation which affects both the efficiency of the force and the morale of police officers.

This manpower deficiency — an average of 7.6 men for the past five years — creates an unnecessary amount of overtime, he said.

But although, in theory at least, the men have the option of taking overtime in cash or time off in lieu, "we are usually paid off rather than being given the opportunity to have time off," because there is simply too much work for too few men.

"It's not unusual to have one (patrol) car covering the whole city of Victoria at one time," Braiden said. "These are the things that seem to affect morale."

Too few traffic offenders are apprehended because the officers are occupied with more important taks, he told the arbitrator.

It is becoming increasingly difficult for city policemen to look forward to their two days off each week, because they know they are "subject to recall" to testify at court cases.

FUEL TRUCK FLIPS OVER

Hot Line Humming With Price Beefs

The Victoria anti-inflation hotline has received more than 20 complaints of price increases during the past four days — with hikes ranging from seven per cent to almost 100 per cent.

All prices have been frozen since Oct. 13, except to pass along cost increases.

One Victoria resident phoned the Revenue Canada hotline to report his home insurance premium had risen about 100 per cent.

At the other end of the scale, a Victorian complained about a seven per cent increase in the price of walnuts in the shell.

All complaints are being forwarded to Ottawa for action by the anti-inflation board.

One of the first complaints was a protest against an increase in the price of coal since Thanksgiving Day. A Victoria coal merchant later phoned in to explain that he was simply passing along an increase due to higher freight rates. He then lodged a formal complaint about the freight rate increase.

The complaint department can be reached by phoning 388-3551 Monday to Friday between 8:15 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. A toll-free number, Zenith 0-4000, is available for Vancouver Island residents phoning Victoria.

Revenue Canada spokesman Robert Chapman said callers should be prepared to identify themselves and the company they are complaining about. The caller's name will be kept confidential.

"It is helpful if the caller knows what the price was before Thanksgiving Day," Chapman said.

"One caller asked a merchant the reason for the price increase, and this information was very helpful."

The price at issue involved a popular cough medicine that had risen to about $5 a bottle from $3. The druggist said the increase was due to an increase in the price of codeine. The caller doubted that the 66 per cent increase was justified because codeine made up only about one per cent of all the ingredients in the medicine. The information has been passed along to Ottawa.

Other complaints received this week include:

The price of tropical plants up 100 per cent since May.

Prescription ointment up nine per cent since September.

Propane gas up 15 per cent.

Flour up 10 per cent.

There were three separate complaints about beer parlor price increases to 40 cents a glass from 35 cents.

Grape juice up 30 per cent.

One brand of soap up 40 per cent.

There were three separate complaints about bread price increases of about three cents a loaf.

Bacon prices were reported to be up 10 per cent. Food prices can rise if they reflect higher prices paid to producers.

Somebody Up There Must Be Laughing

ONE DAY WHEN SUMmer was on the land, I looked up at our newly-repaired roof and offered one of those fathead predictions that set the gods snickering.

"There," I said. "We shouldn't have any more trouble with that!"

Summer passed. The rainy season arrived. This morning I sat down to my typewriter and fed it a wad of paper.

My first two-fingered assault on the keys was answered by a splash. I peered up at the ceiling and saw a pie-sized wet patch.

My point isn't that a rain-laden southeaster should dislodge a shingle. Elderly roofs can and do leak. But it occured to me while mopping up my flooded machine that something more than coincidence had positioned the leak where it would cause maximum confusion. Someone up there must be laughing.

As an optimist, I like to believe that the wind is tempered to the shorn lamb.

Still, even an optimist can have his moments of pessimism, and in mine I occasionally become aware of a phenomenon that asserts itself when man least expects it.

Call it the laughter of the gods.

A friend of mine heard it distinctly in the lobby of a crowded hotel where he'd just learned that his reservation wasn't effective until later that week. He'd laid out his trip schedule with meticulous care from a pocketbook calendar a year outdated.

Another friend must have caught at least a chuckle when he gazed at the 64-pound tyee salmon landed by the neophyte whom he'd coached in the art of mooching.

"I did just what you told me," said the lucky fisherman as he displayed his catch. "Put my boat in at Ken Forde's ramp, ran out past the edge of the kelp, and bumped a Deadly Dick off the bottom. I reeled it up a couple of feet like you said, and Wham!"

Then he added the stinger. "Too bad you had to work in your garden."

These come-uppances with which presumption and over-confidence are tumbled often reveal a subtle pattern.

The fellow who elected to work in his garden was sure in his private mind that the fishing wouldn't be worth a hoot.

The driver who boasts that his car hasn't demanded so much as a new fuel pump in 90,000 miles is asking for the expensive lunkity-klunk of a broken connecting rod.

This isn't to suggest that a proper spirit of humility is insurance against unwelcome attention from the powers that sit in judgment on our affairs.

I can remember no man less inclined to court the divine laughter than a surveyor whose attitude toward the black bears of our Island woods was nothing if not respectful.

"No point in crowding your luck," he counselled me as we began a wide detour around a valley elbow where we'd spotted a half-pint blackie foraging for grubs.

This prudent observation delivered, he barged his way through an ocean spray clump that harbored a hornet's nest. He wound up plastering his stings with wet mud in a creekbed.

It's possible, of course, that the laughter of the gods may sometimes be of benevolent intent.

The supposedly trouble-proof car that popped a rod was revealed by garage diagnosis to be dangerously loose in the steering assembly.

It's even possible that the flooding of my typewriter, which is still a trifle damp, may be more than a piece of Olympian whimsy.

Could someone up there be trying to tell me something?

Ask The Times

Q. What was the original estimated cost of the 1976 Olympics? How much have we gone over the estimated cost? Did Munich lose money with their Olympics, and if so how much? — L.D. and E.F.

A. Our file on this subject has so many different figures it looks like a gymnasium. But the original 1976 construction estimate appears to have been $250 million plus $60 million for administration on revenue of $310 millions. The budget has since risen to $653 million, then $714 million, including construction costs of $580 million and administration of $73 million on revenue of $450 million. That would leave a deficit of $264 million, but this figure has since been revised to $320 million. A year frow now, when the games are over, there may be a more accurate accounting. Munich games are variously reported to have cost $600 million — $1 billion with a deficit of $262 million.

Today's Highlights

Documentary Special, on 9 at 11:30 a.m. Special photographic techniques highlights this documentary on, The Birth and Death of a Star. (30 mins.)

SAMMY DAVIS JR.
. . . on 12 at 10 p.m.

Skate Canada, on 8 at 2 p.m. and 11 p.m. Coverage of this third annual event live from Edmonton. The women's final and men's short program are scheduled for 2 p.m.; with coverage of the dance and men's final at 11 p.m. (90 mins. at 2 p.m.; 2 hrs. at 11 p.m.)

Great Performances, on 9 at 3. A repeat telecast of episode 3 in the seven-part BBC series, Jennie: Lady Randolph Churchill, the story of Winston Churchill's American-born mother, starring Lee Remick in the title role. (60 mins.)

Wide World of Sports, on 4 at 5. Today's program includes a segment on Evel Knievel, as he attempts the longest motorcycle jumps of his career — approximately 150 feet over 14 buses. This is the much-publicized daredevil's first jump since he fractured his spine last May in an unsuccessful bid to clear 13 buses at London's Wembley Stadium. (90 mins.)

Carol Burnett Show, on 7 at 10. Carol and her regulars Harvey Korman, Tim Conway and Vicki Lawrence welcome the Pointer Sisters to tonight's show. (60 mins.)

Sammy and Company, on 12 at 10. Host Sammy Davis Jr., welcomes José Feliciano, Lorna Luft (Liza Minnelli's sister), and baseball's Willie Mays and Leo Durocher to tonight's variety show. (90 mins.)

Saturday Night, on 5 at 11:30. Tonight's edition of this new variety show is hosted by Rob Reiner (of All in the Family) who welcomes among his guests his wife, actress Penny Marshall; and the Lockers, a contemporary dance group. (90 mins.)

Movies

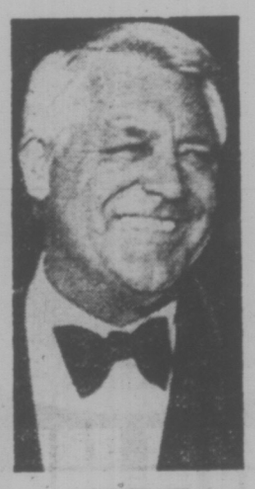
The Little Princesss (xx), on 11 at 2. A 1939 Shirley Temple drama about a waif who haunts army hospitals looking for her father, co-starring Richard Greene and Anita Louise.

Ten North Frederick (xxx), on 7 at 8:30. Gary Cooper, Diane Varsi and Geraldine Fitzgerald star in this well-acted 1958 film rendering of John O'Hara's best-seller about a businessmen's decision to enter politics, and its repercussions on his personal life.

The Shape of Things to Come (xxxx), on 2 at 7:30. Excellent special effects highlight this spectacular 1936 English-made film version of the H. G. Wells novel about a civilization in the year 2036, starring Raymond Massey, Ralph Richardson and Cedric Hardwicke.

Born Innocent, on 5 at 9. The much-publicized "rape" scene has been toned down in this re-telecasting of the 1974 drama that realistically examines the effects of reform school on a naive teen-ager committed as an incorrigible runaway. Cast includes Linda Blair (of the Exorcist) and Joanna Miles. However, the film still comes with the warning that it may not be suitable for all members of the family.

CICELY TYSON
. . . on 6 at 9 p.m.



CARY GRANT
. . . on 12 at 11:30 p.m.

Sounder (xxxx), on 6 at 9. Cicely Tyson and Paul Winfield (both nominated for Academy Awards) give brilliant performances in this critically-acclaimed 1972 drama about a family of black sharecroppers coping with poverty and prejudice in 1930 rural Louisiana. Recommended.

The French Connection (xxxx), on 8 at 9. Television premiere of the multi-Oscar winning 1971 crime drama based on a real-life narcotics investigation. Gene Hackman plays Jimmy "Popeye" Doyle, a veteran New York City detective who becomes obsessed with the case of his career — a multi-million dollar shipment of heroin being smuggled into the city. Recommended (but not for all members of the family.)

The Phantom of the Opera (xxxx), on 9 at 9. A 1925 silent horror classic, featuring Lon Chaney in one of his greatest roles as the crazed musician who haunts an opera house, and takes revenge of a lady singing star.

Poppy (xxx)), on 11 at 11. An entertaining 1936 W. C. Fields comedy about an itinerent patent-medicine man who palms off his adopted daughter as a missing heiress.

The French Connection (xxxx), on 6 at 11:20. (See earlier this evening for details.)

Indiscreet (xxx), on 12 at 11:30. An elegent and sophisticated 1958 romantic comedy, starring Cary Grant and Ingrid Bergman.

Under the Yum Yum Tree (xx), on 7 at midnight. Jack Lemmon stars in this lightweight 1963 comedy about a lecherous landlord who prefers to rent his apartments to pretty women. The film is highlighted by a good comedy supporting cast that includes Imogene Coca, Edie Adams and Paul Lyndde.

Will Penny (xxx), on 5 at 1 a.m. A fine performance by Charlton Heston highlights this offbeat but interesting 1968 western drama about a veteran cowhand who tries to stay uninvolved and peaceful despite interfering circumstances. Heston's co-star, Joan Hackett, is equally fine as a frontier woman trying to build a life for herself and her son.

An American in Paris (xxxx), on 8 at 1:15 a.m. A multi-Oscar winning 1951 musical highlighted by Great Gershwin songs and brilliantly performed Gene Kelly-Leslie Caron dance sequences. Recommended for late-night viewers.

High Society (xxx), on 6 at 1:20 a.m. Grace Kelly, Frank Sinatra and Bing Crosby star in this pleasant 1956 musical re-make of The Phijadelphia Story.

You'll Like My Mother, on 8 at 3:30 a.m. No rating available on this 1972 suspense-drama about a pregnant young widow trapped in a snowbound house by a mentally-deranged young man, starring Patty Duke and Richard Thomas.

The French Connection Premieres on BCTV

Gene Hackman's acting career got off to a very slow start, but once he started he was really moving. In the few short years since he turned his talents to acting, Hackman has won an Academy Award, plus two additional Oscar nominations, and turned into a much sought-after leading actor.

Hackman stars as Popeye Doyle, the zealous cop on a heroin caper, the role that won him his Oscar in The French Connection to be shown for the first time on television as a special presentation of BCTV on Saturday, October 25 at 9 p.m. (also on Channel 6 at 11:20 p.m. and the CBS Network on Thursday October 30 at 9 p.m. on Channel 7.)

It took Hackman 31 years to make the plunge into entertainment. "Actually," he said, "I decided at the age of 12 to become an actor; I just had a tough time getting up the courage to do anything about it."

At age 16, he started moving his career ahead. He left home, did a stint in the Marines, and then moved from odd-job to odd-job until he was 30. Finally, he started theatrical training and subsequently earned a series of character parts.

Nothing big happened until he drew a leading role in Bonnie and Clyde, which earned him his first Oscar nomination.

"That was the first big break for me," he said. "I hadn't done anything to merit that kind of part, but I had worked with Warren Beatty in Lilith, one of my three previous films, all of which I managed to get lost in, and he's a very loyal guy. He called and asked if I'd like the part, and that's what really got things rolling."

In the brief span of 18 months, Hackman then made six films, including I Never Sang For My Father, which got him his second Oscar nomination. He was considered a reliable character actor, until his leading-role break in The French Connection.

GENE HACKMAN stars in his Oscar-winning role as "Popeye" Doyle in The French Connection, on Saturday at 9 p.m. on Channel 8 (11:20 p.m. on Channel 6).

SKATE CANADA—Top-ranking amateurs from 14 countries, including Canada, compete in Edmonton, with television coverage at 2 p.m. on Channel 8 (women's final and men's short program) and at 11 p.m. (the dance and men's final).

LIVE COVERAGE OF EVEL'S JUMP

Evel Knievel, the world's most famous daredevil, will attempt the longest motorcycle leap in his colorful career, live from King's Island, King's Mills, Ohio, and the Harlem Globetrotters will perform their basketball wizardry from the Capital Centre, Landover, Md., as two of the world's greatest attractions are spotlighted on ABC's Wide World of Sports, Saturday, Oct. 25 (5:00-6:30 p.m.).

Last May 26 (as seen on Wide World), Evel Knievel attempted to jump his motorcycle over 13 buses parked side-by-side at London's Wembley Stadium – and failed.

After his spectacular crash, Evel said he would retire. But, as his body mended, he decided to give it another go. Only, this time, he announced on the ABC Sports special, Evel Knievel: Portait of a Daredevil, he wouldn't try 13 buses because they represented an unlucky number. So, he'll try to clear 14 buses — the longest attempt he has ever made.

The site for his attempt is the brand-new King's Island family recreation park, just outside Cincinnati, and more than 70,000 spectators are expected to be on hand to see Knievel attempt this prodigious feat.

Today's Highlights

UN Day Concert, on 9 at 2. The 30th annual musical salute to the United Nations, featuring the world premiere of a new cantata — To Posterity — written by Gottfried von Einem. (2 hrs.)

World of Disney, on 5 at 7. Tonight's program expands to two hours with the showing of the 1972 comedy, Now You See Him, Now You Don't, about two science students who discover the secret of invisibility. (2 hrs.)

Lowell Thomas Remembers, on 9 at 7:30. Tonight's film clips include events from 1952 with coverage of the Democratic and Republican conventions and the landslide victory of President Eisenhower; and scenes of an atomic-bomb test in Nevada. (30 mins.)

Evening at Symphony, on 9 at 8. The Boston Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Michael Tilson Thomas, performs works by Stravinsky and Borodin. (60 mins.)

October Crisis, on 2 and 6 at 8:30. A CBC documentary special interweaving newsreel footage, interviews and dramatizations to reconstruct the events of October, 1970, when FLQ terrorists kidnapped a British diplomat (James Cross) and murdered a high-ranking Quebec official (Pierre Laporte). Among those interviewed are James Cross (now living in London) and Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa (2½ hrs.)

ABC Theatre Special, on 4 at 9. A repeat showing of the acclaimed, The Missiles of October, a dramatization of the 1962 Cuban missile crisis. The script is based primarily on public record, and an excellent cast includes William Devane as John F. Kennedy, Martin Sheen as Robert Kennedy and Howard da Silva as Nikita Khrushchev. (3 hrs.)

Ascent of Man, on 9 at 10. Part 5 of the acclaimed 13-part series conceived and narrated by the late British scientist, Dr. Jacob Bronowski, focuses on the origin and development of mathematics. (60 mins.)

W5, on 8 at 10. One of tonight's scheduled topics is a report on the controversial subject of capital punishment. (60 mins.)

Pan-American Games, on 2 at 11:40. Highlights of the final events and closing ceremonies at the Pan-Am Games being held in Mexico City. (2 hrs.)

Movies

Jack and the Witch, on 12 at 1. A 1969 Japanese-made cartoon about the adventures of a small boy and his animal friends.

The Leopard Man, on 11 at 1:30. No rating available on this 1943 thriller about the strange murders that occur after a black leopard escapes from a New Mexico nightclub act, starring Dennis O'Keefe.

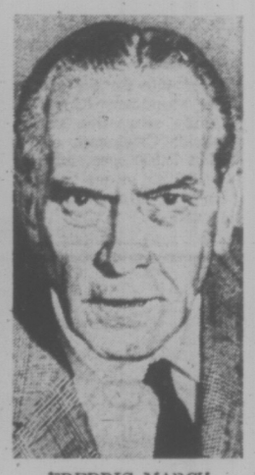
Letters from Three Lovers (xx), on 6 and 8 at 2:30. Some familiar TV faces (Martin Sheen, Belinda Montgomery, Juliet Mills, Ken Berry) highlight this 1973 trio of dramas about the personal complications caused by delayed mail.

The Battle of the Sexes (xxx), on 12 at 2:30. Peter Sellers, Robert Morley and Constance Cummings star in this entertaining 1959 British-made comedy about an efficiency expert who tries to revolutionize a staid manufacturing firm.

ELIZABETH TAYLOR
. . . on 7 at 4 p.m.

Mighty Joe Young, on 11 at 3. No rating available on this 1949 fantasy about what happens when a giant African ape is brought to Hollywood to star in a night club act.

Suddenly Last Summer (xxx), on 7 at 4. Elizabeth Taylor, Katherine Hepburn and Montgomery Clift star in this 1959 film rendering of Tennessee Williams' macabre play about the complex relationship between a strong-willed matron, her mentally-unbalanced niece and a psychiatrist.



FREDRIC MARCH
. . . on 12 at 9 p.m.

The Best Years of Our Lives (xxxx), on 12 at 9. A 1946 movie classic about three war veterans trying to re-adjust to civilian lives, featuring superb performances by the whole cast which includes Fredric March, Myrna Loy and Dana Andrews. Recommended.

An American in Paris (xxxx), on 6 at 11:20. An Oscar for Best Picture of 1951 went to this lavish and entertaining musical, featuring great Gershwin song, and the brilliant dancing of Gene Kelly and Leslie Caron.

Walk on the Wild Side (xx), on 7 at midnight. A muddled, botched-up 1962 film version of Nelson Algren's hard-hitting novel about the sinful side of New Orleans, focusing on an itinerant Texan and the women in his life, starring Laurence Harvey, Barbara Stanwyck, Jane Fonda and Capucine.

High Society (xxx), on 8 at midnight. Grace Kelly, Frank Sinatra and Bing Crosby star in this pleasant 1956 musical re-make of The Philadelphia Story about an heiress whose wedding plans are sabotaged by her ex-husband and a brash reporter.

Call to Danger (xx), on 12 at 12:30 a.m. Routine 1973 made-for-TV crime-drama about a Federal agent who engineers a bold rescue of a kidnapped underworld informer, starring Peter Graves and Diana Muldaur.

LESLIE CARON
. . . on 6 at 11:20 p.m.

You'll Like My Mother, on 6 at 2:15 a.m. No rating available on this 1972 suspense-drama about a pregnant young widow trapped in a snowbound house with a mentally-deranged young man, starring Patty Duke and Richard Thomas.

MEETING PLACE TRAVELS NORTH

Four young Inuit are ordained in an igloo-shaped cathedral on CBC-TV's worship program series, Meeting Place on Sunday, Oct. 26 at 9 a.m.

There is "a new North emerging, where white ways threaten to drown the fragile culture of the Inuit (Eskimo). To meet the challenge, the Anglican Church of Canada is training men who are bilingual and capable of dealing with both cultures.

Meeting Place will visit St. Jude's Cathedral in Frobisher Bay, N.W.T., where Bishop John Sperry will ordain Jonas Allooloo, Andrew Atagotaluk, Simon Okpukok and Benjamin Arreak to the diaconate of the Diocese of the Arctic.

Host Donald Henderson will introduce viewers to the white world of Frobisher Bay and take them to meetings of the diocesan Synod, where Inuit and whites from across the Northwest Territories and northern Quebec gather to plan the work of the diocese.

The ordination sermon will be preached by Archbishop G. F. C. Jackson, head of the ecclesiastical province of Rupert's Land, which includes the Arctic diocese.

After their ordination, the young men will move from seats in the congregation to the altar, to read the Gospel and serve the elements of Holy Communion.

Meeting Place will visit Frobisher Bay again on Sunday, Jan. 25 at 11 a.m. to see St. Jude's as a parish church and explore its involvement in the town. Series producer is Garth Goddard.

THE KIDNAPPING of British diplomat James Cross (above) triggered the events in October, 1970, which sent shockwaves across the country. On Sunday at 8:30 p.m. on Channels 2 and 6, CBC-TV will present The October Crisis, a historic 2½-hour documentary-drama reconstructing the mood and events of the time. The program includes an interview with Mr. Cross in London.

THE MISSILES OF OCTOBER—An award-winning drama special about the thirteen eventful days that led up to the 1962 Cuban missile crisis, will be retelecast on Sunday at 9 p.m. on Channel 4. The drama features William Devane as President Kennedy and Howard da Silva at Nikita Khrushchev.

Original Shelley Classic Presented on CBC Radio

Mary Shelley's gothic horror story, Frankenstein, has seen many interpretations: on film, via Boris Karloff, Andy Warhol, and Mel Brooks; as a TV production; and in two contemporary novels which purport to carry her creation a step further. For its first stage adapatation, New Brunswick poet Alden Nowlan and Walter Learning, artistic director of Theatre New Brunswick, went back to the original novel. The result was instant success.

Frankenstein — The Man Who Became God was staged at Theatre New Brunswick in the summer of 1974. Critics were unanimous in their praise for the handsomely mounted production, its engrossing dialogue, its theatrical as well as literary heights, and singled out especially the performance of David Brown as The Creature, an ugly but pathetic giant who commits violent acts only because of his rejection by humanity.

David Brown re-creates his stage role in the CBC Radio version of Frankenstein, to be aired as a special 90-minute production on CBC Stage, Saturday, Oct. 25 at 8:30 p.m. Direction is by John Douglas in Halifax. Steven Freygood composed and conducted the musical score.

Completing the cast are Neil Munro as Count Victor von Frankenstein; Joan Gregson as his fiancee, Elizabeth Lavenza; Richard Donat, as Robert Walton; David Renton, Henry Clerbal; Bill Fulton, Mr. Williamson, and Conrad; Hamilton McClymont, first seaman; Joe Rutten, Fritz and second seaman; Graham Whitehead, Hans; Joan Orenstein, Louise; Matthew Allen, William von Frankenstein; David Hemblen, DeLacey.

Mary Godwin Shelley wrote Frankenstein when she was only 19; two years before she had eloped with the poet Percy Bysshe Shelley. While living in Switzerland in 1816, the Shelleys, along with their friend Lord Byron, one dark and stormy night decided to see who could write the best horror story. Her novel of the brilliant young scientist Victor Frankenstein who robbed graves to fashion a living being has become a legend.

Walter Learning is a producer, director and actor, originally from Newfoundland; Alden Nowlan has won two Governor Generals Awards for poetry, written a collection of short stories, a novel, and dozens of magazine articles. Their collaboration has since been staged at the Vancouver Playhouse and at Montreal's Centaur Theatre. Frankenstein is to open again in Fredericton on Octber 10, prior to an extensive tour of the Atlantic provinces. The London Little Theatre will present it after Christmas, and next year the production will be staged in Montreal during the Olympics.

"Monster" roles are nothing new to David Brown, a graduate of Dalhousie Law School, who left the courtroom for the theatre. He has played Count Dracula as well as Jekyll and Hyde. Since leaving Halifax in 1969, he has performed in theatres across Canada, in the U.S., Venezuela, the Bahamas and Bermuda. This past summer he directed and appeared in Oh Coward, in North Hatley, Quebec, and directed My Fat Friend for the Neptune Theatre.

To Brown, Frankenstein is a universal story of loneliness and alienation. "The Creature wants desperately to be loved, but he is so hideous that even his creator rejects him. He is utterly alone, utterly rejected, hated even by the being whom he looks upon as God. But every human being has felt that way at least once in his life, if only for a few minutes. So utter loneliness and utter alienation are things that everyone can understand.

Writing about his version of Frankenstein in a recent issue of Weekend Magazine, Nowlan says: " ... Radio, on which the horror makes its presence known only through shambling footsteps and creaking doors, is the most effective medium for dramatizing a tale of supernatural terror."

Anyone who remembers the tales of suspense and horror on old-time radio can attest to that. But even if listeners have seen every other version of Frankenstein that's ever been made, it's unlikely they've ever heard anything quite like this one coming up on CBC Stage, Oct. 25.

Movies

Ordeal (xx), on 8 at 12:45. A 1973 made-for-television movie about an injured man abandoned in the desert by his faithless wife and her lover, starring Arthur Hill, Diana Muldaur and James Stacy.

The Nutty Professor (xx), on 11 at 1. Jerry Lewis plays his own version of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde in this 1963 comedy, co-starring Stella Stevens.

The Caretakers (xx), on 5 at 3:30. A good cast (Robert Stack, Joan Crawford, Polly Bergen and Janis Paige) is wasted in this insensitive 1963 drama which crudely tackles the touchy subject of mental illness. Of the cast, Miss Paige fares best in the role of a mental institution patient.

The Lives of Jenny Dolan, on 5 at 9. An unpreviewed 1975 made-for-television suspense-drama, starring Shirley Jones as a glamorous newspaper reporter who, while investigating the assassination of a political figure, finds her own life is in danger. Supporting cast includes Stephen Boyd, Dana Wynter and Farley Granger.

SHIRLEY JONES
. . . on 5 at 9 p.m.

JOHN WAYNE
. . . on 1 at 11:30 p.m.

PAUL WINFIELD
. . . on 5 at midnight

That Kind of Woman (xx), on 11 at 9. Sophia Loren and Tab Hunter make an unlikely romantic team in this 1959 soap opera about a Second World War love affair between a paratrooper and a kept woman who meet on a New York-bound train.

The Woman Hunter, on 12 at 10. No rating available on this 1972 made-for-TV drama about a socialite's involvement with an international thief, filmed in Acapulco and starring Barbara Eden and Stuart Whitman.

Stagecoach (xxxx), on 4 at 11:30. A 1939 John Ford classic western about a group of passengers on a dangerous journey through hostile Indian country. Ford's brilliant direction won him the New York film Critic's Award, and Oscars were awarded to supporting actor Thomas Mitchell and the film's score. Other in a great cast include John Wayne, Claire Trevor, Andy Devine and John Carradine.

The Elevator (xx), on 12 at 11:30. Standard 1974 TV suspense drama, about a group of diverse people stuck between the floors of a high-rise office building in a stalled elevator. Cast includes James Farintino, Myrna Loy and Roddy McDowall.

It's Good to Be Alive (xx), on 6 at midnight. A stirring 1975 drama, featuring a fine performance by Paul Winfield (Sounder) as Brooklyn Dodger catcher Roy Campanella, from the height of his baseball career to his struggle to rebuild his life after an auto accidnt turned him into a helpless quadriplegic.

Doctor in Trouble (xx), on 8 at midnight. A predictable 1970 British-made comedy, starring James Robertson Justice, Harry Secombe and Leslie Phillips.

Kiss the Girls and Make Them Die (xx), on 7 at 12:30 a.m. Mike Connors, Raf Vallone, Dorothy Provine and Terry-Thomas star in this 1966 Italian-made spy spoof.

Gun Fury (xx), on 8 at 1:55 a.m. A slow-paced but interesting 1953 western drama about a man searching for his kidnapped fiance, starring Rock Hudson and Donna Reed.

Our Man in Havana (xx), on 6 at 2 a.m. Alec Guinness, Maureen O'Hara, Burl Ives, Ralph Richardson and Noel Coward star in this somewhat distorted, but still entertaining 1960 film rendering of Graham Greene's satirical spy thriller about a vacuum cleaner salesman recruited as a secret agent.

NEW SERIES

By, For And About Women

Woman Alive! A new, ten-week television magazine series made for women, by women, will have its premiere on October 27 at 9:30 p.m. on KCTS-9.

Produced by WNET, New York, the series is about change, and will provide a forum for women and men to explore from many different points of view the way those changes are affecting society in general.

The first program of the Woman Alive! Series opens with a song. Gretchen Cryer and Nancy Ford, who have had an award-winning musical partnership for more than twenty years sing their affectionate but wry song about an older woman's love affair with a much younger man, Do Whatcha Gotta Do To Make Yourself Happy.

The documentary film segment of this program takes a look at army life for the army wife. Army Wives: Change of Command was filmed by Patricia Sides, at Fort Sill, Oklahoma, the fifth largest army base in the U.S. The film is an example of how wives are changing in their attitude toward what is traditionally expected of them as extensions of their husbands' lives and careers.

Many of the wives at Fort Still, particularly the older ones, are seeking change. However, any suggestion of change, say the wives, is considered by many in the military to be disloyal to both the army and the husband and may even be construed to be unpatriotic.

Picking up on the theme of the changes women are making, Cryer and Ford sing Changing, a song about a young woman's self discovery. Gaining personal, individual freedom through people discovering themselves is the underlying theme of many of Cryer and Ford's songs.

The commentary on the premiere program of the Woman Alive! series is provided by Sheila Tobias, Associate Provost of Wesleyan University, Middletown, Connecticut, who talks about math anxiety for women, the growing math avoidance by high school and college women today, the implications of that anxiety, the cause of it and what is being done by the academic world to correct it.

As the program opened with a song, so it closes. Cryer and Ford sing Clinging Vine, the story of a young woman growing from one kind of "Wonder Woman" into another kind of "Wonder Woman."

Subsequent programs in the Woman Alive! series will include exploration of such subjects as the effect on women of self-assertiveness training; the growing controversy among women about volunteer work; teenagers and their expectations as they look toward womanhood; the true picture of women in the labor force; woman power as an organized force; the pressures and expectations men have to deal with in their lives; the middle-ages woman, as well as many other matters of particular importance to women, which are nonetheless of relevance to everyone.

On November 3 at 9:00 p.m., preceding a Woman Alive! show, KCTS-9 will air a local program dealing with the pioneer work in assertiveness training done in Seattle. This show will seek to put this modality and other techniques appealing to women into perspective.

Woman Alive! is funded by the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, and is produced in collaboration with MS. Magazine. Ronnie Eldridge is Executive Producer, while Joan Shigekawa is Producer.

NANCY FORD together with her associate composer Gretchen Cryer celebrate today's woman in the new series, Woman Alive!, beginning on Monday at 9:30 p.m. on Channel 9.

Movies

A Girl Named Sooner, on 8 at 12:45. No rating available on this 1975 TV drama about the readjustments of a spirited, sensitive backwoods girl to a comfortable foster home in a 1930s Indiana town, starring Susan Deer in the title role and co-starring Cloris Leachman.

Town Tamer (xx), on 11 at 1. Dana Andrews and Terry Moore star in this routine 1965 western about a frontier lawyer searching for his wife's killer.

Call Me Madam (xxx), on 5 at 3:30. A colorful and lavish 1959 film version of the Irving Berlin stage hit musical, featuring Ethel Merman as the free - wheeling Washington "hostess with the mostess."

ETHEL MERMAN
. . . on 5 at 3:30 p.m.

PETER LORRE
. . . on 12 at 7 p.m.

The Mask of Dimitrios (xxx), on 12 at 7. An occasionally exciting 1944 adaptation of the Eric Ambler novel about a Dutch mystery writer searching for a master crook whose exploits fascinate him, starring Zachary Scott, Sydney Greenstreet, Faye Emerson and Peter Lorre.

Secret of the Incas (xx), on 11 at 9. The rediscovered city of Machu Picchu in Peru's Andes Mountains makes a fascinating background for this otherwise routine 1954 adventure, starring Charlton Heston.

Kill Two Birds, on 4 at 11:30. No rating available on this recently made TV mystery about a bank robber who has completed his prison term sets out to recover the money stolen by his partners-in-crime who were never caught. Cast includes Susan Hampshire and David Baker.

The Adventures of Nick Carter (xxx), on 12 at 11:30. A veteran supporting cast (Broderick Crawford, Shelley Winters and Pat O'Brien) highlight this 1972 TV mystery, starring Robert Conrad as the famed private eye.

The Conjugal Bed (xxxx), on 2 at midnight. A ribald, 1963 Italian-made comedy-drama about a 40-year-old bachelor who marries a bewitching young girl, and she literally, loves him to death. Taken seriously, it could be a fine horror story; taken in the manner intended, it's a hilarious satire. Dubbed into English.

Lawman (xxx), on 6 at midnight. A strong performance by Burt Lancaster highlights this well-produced 1971 western about a veteran marshall hunting for the killers who shot up his town.

Jack of Diamonds, on 8 at midnight. No rating available on this 1952 British-made adventure about a yacht owner on a lost treasure hunt.

El Greco (xx), on 7 at 12:30. Mel Ferrer stars in this 1964 European - made biography about the famous Greek painter's life in Spain, and his tragic love affair with a noblewoman.

A Woman of Distinction (xx), on 6 at 2:05 a.m. Rosalind Russell and Ray Milland lend a little style to this otherwise predictable 1960 comedy about the romance between a dignified college dean and a staid British professor.

BURT LANCASTER
. . . on 6 at midnight

The Movie Murderer (xx), on 8 at 2:15 a.m. A 1970 mystery-drama about an insurance investigator trying to find the arsonist responsible for destroying movie films. Cast includes Arthur Kennedy and Warren Oates.

LAUGH-IN DUO BACK

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Is television ready for a weekly Rowan and Martin review of the news? Rowan and Martin think so, ABC heartily agrees, and the network will present the pilot show Nov. 5.

"Two years ago we couldn't have done a show like this," says Dick Martin, the basset-faced zany of the comedy team.

"Watergate was still going on, and people were too uptight to laugh at the news."

"Now the timing is just right," agrees Dan Rowan, the smooth straight man. "We're coming into an election year, the Fords are doing things you can make jokes about and the Democrats are funnier than ever."

The Rowan and Martin Report next month will set the pattern for a series expected to reach the ABC network in January. The show will be done at ABC Television Centre and it won't be cheap — 11 writers, six on-camera reporters, five outside reporters, etc.

Because of the timely nature of the program, there will be no chance for repeats. Hence ABC is ordering 32 shows instead of the usual order of 20 plus 10 repeats for most series.

As part of the deal, Rowan and Martin will also star in a weekly late-night show for ABC. This will be scheduled for Monday "because Johhny Carson isn't on his show Monday night," Rowan explained. "We'll be bucking John Davidson."

Heritage Special Profiles Old and New World Scots

Canadians are not an indigenous people. To this country have come the pioneers, the immigrants and the adventurers from Germany, England, Poland, the Ukraine, Ireland, Scotland, Italy and from almost every other country in the world. Canada can only be defined by realizing that we are all parts of the first and last immigrant landing in our country. In order to examine what the Canadian character is, we must know what Canada consists of, and that is hundreds of thousands of people bringing with them the riches of new ideas, cultures and historic traditions. Only through a process of assimilation and adaptation, can we hope to define the Canadian character.

Heritage is an examination of the similarities and differences of the ethnic groups that make up the Canadian mosaic. The fifth episode in the series is The Scots telecasting Tuesday, October 28, 10:00-11.00 p.m. on the CTV Television Network.

Scottish history is a study of passions, of hating and loving, fighting and poetry. A small and beautiful country, Scotland was for centuries a battleground. Today, people of Scottish descent, even in Canada, retain a strong identity made firm by a remembrance of persecutions. Long ago bans on the kilt, the bagpipe, and and ceremony have reaped benefits for us in the Scots observance of their heritage today.

Of those who fled from Scotland, the biggest change for them in this country was probably independence. Many had been cotters, crofters and tenants and now they had land of their own. Some became teachers, like McGill and McMaster; or politicians and William Lyon MacKenzie; or ministers, like John Bethune and John Strachan.

Sir William MacDonald was one of these men. His family came to the first big settlement in Canada in Prince Edward Island in 1772. A man devoted to the work ethic, he began as a salesman and went on to found the enormous MacDonald Tobacco plant. On his deathbed, he turned the factory over to another Scot, whose grandson, David MacDonald Stewart, is Chairman of the Board today.

Sir William had devoted much of his time to projects such as new schools and universities, and David Stewart has carried on in a like tradition. A romantic, when it comes to his Scottish heritage, David and his wife are fascinated by history. Stewart's most ambitious project aside from time and money spent on schools, sports, Scottish gatherings, has been the founding of a museum in an old fort in Montreal.

Filled with Scottish, French and Canadian history, the museum brings in more than ninety thousand people a year. Stewart makes periodic trips to Europe for additional artifacts, and to oversee the restoring of a Scottish castle.

Reality Distorted by Television Cops

By JAMES J. DOYLE

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Television has got away from the old flat-footed, pot-bellied cop which used to dominate the movie screen. But that's about all.

TV producers and writers come to Lt. Dan Cooke of the Los Angeles Police Department for technical advice. Unfortunately they rarely take it and Cooke says there is little semblance between a real cop and the hero one sees on the television screen.

"Some of the stuff that comes up, you can't believe," Cooke said. "I don't know where they're getting the writers."

Cooke, the Los Angeles Police Department's officer in charge of public information, has for many years been answering questions for writers and producers on police procedures.

Many of the television police shows are about the Los Angeles department, or based on LAPD files.

Only two shows, Cooke says, accurately portrayed police officers. They are Dragnet and Adam 12, both now out of production, but still distributed in syndication.

Cooke's office had full script approval on the two shows.

"The public is getting the impression their doctors can solve problems as easily as Marcus Welby and lawyers can handle cases as quickly as on the lawyer shows.

"But policemen don't act as they do on television. There are no supercops. There are a lot of very good cops, but they're members of a team."

Kojak? "He's pretty heavy. It's a very good show and I enjoy it. But he's rather violence-prone," Cooke said.

Columbo? "We don't have anyone running around looking like a ragamuffin. But that's part of his charm. And we don't have anyone driving an antique car.

PETER FALK

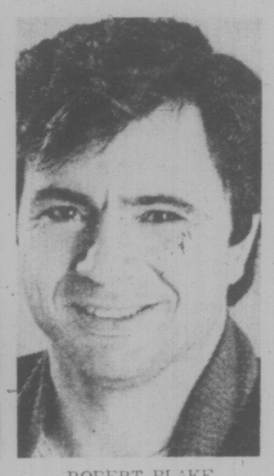
ANGIE DICKINSON
. . . "removed from reality"



ROBERT BLAKE
. . . "murderer with a badge"

"Police Story is one of the best in all areas and technically very good, with one exception.

"They are constantly rapping the brass. Hardly a week goes by that they don't have someone talking about the 'ivory tower'. And almost every week they have some cop hung up on a drinking problem or a female problem."

Cooke said Hawaii Five-O has beautiful scenery. "But I've never seen them with a search warrant, or with probable cause to make an arrest.

"After the show had been on for several seasons I was called by a writer who wanted some technical advice. I said, 'why ruin it by making it accurate. It's a succesful show.'

Except the new Mobile One, that is, for which Cooke is the regular advisor. "On every single correction I've made, they have made the change," he said.

Baretta? "I can't really be fair to Baretta. I saw the opening show and the following Monday the producer called and said he wanted some advice on a script. I told him to burn it. Baretta is just a murderer with a badge."

"Barney Miller — I love it. The writers have been here several times. The show isn't the way it happens here, but we had a visit from a police officer from a town in New Jersey, and he said that's really the way it is there."

"The men on the real SWAT team can hardly wait until it's off the air. There's only one similarity, and that's the name."

"Police Woman," he said, is quite far removed from reality, although there are a lot of true situations. But police just don't have free rein that way to conduct their own investigations. There is a hierarchy here and investigators are pretty closely guarded."

And the private eyes of TV? "They've enjoyable. But accurate — no. Police handle homicides, not private detectives. The police don't work closely with private investigators."

Cooke said the shows can have a good effect, or a bad one. Adam 12 and Dragnet actually helped recruiting and brought a great deal of interest from poeople all over the country wanting to know more about police procedures, he said.

On the other hand, some shows have an immediately bad effect. Kung Fu was one, although not a police show. Two segments resulted in changes in California laws, he said. After nanchuku sticks — two heavy sticks joined by a length of rope — were shown, similar weapons showed up on high school campuses and on the streets. They have been made illegal.

Another imaginative item called the shirikun, a disc with sharp points like a star that is thrown like a deadly frisbee, also has been outlawed in the state.

Cooke said some gangs started making them from bicycle sprockets by sharpening the points.

Generally, he said, police shows make the public more aware of police problems.

Canadian-Born Economist Films Series for Television

By TOM SHALES

WASHINGTON (WP) — The John Kenneth Galbraith Show is now being filmed in Washington by the British Broadcasting Corporation for televising sometime next year over there on the BBC and, tentatively, over here in the U.S. on public television.

Of course it isn't actually called The John Kenneth Galbraith Show, but that's what it is. The eminent economist, ambassador, novelist and former Harvard prof is filming segments for a 13-part series called "The Age of Uncertainty," which is nothing less than his "very personal view," according to Galbraith aide Andrea Williams, of the socioeconomic history of the world.

JOHN GALBRAITH

Galbraith has been filming with the British crew since April. Last weekend he and his wife, Catherine, showed up for a scene in the board room of the Federal Reserve Building. The BBC crew was waiting patiently for him. Throughout the filming, they were all so decent and polite that an American film crew probably would have fainted dead away at the sight of their behavior.

Only Frank O'Brien, special assistant to the Federal Reserve Board, looked at all peevish. "I have nothing to do with this," he declared disdainfully.

"Now again, what's the procedure?" asked Galbraith, striking into the room very tall and lofty and, in a grey suit, looking entirely economic. That he does not talk or write like a grey economist is undoubtedly why Galbraith has written and is hosting this series.

The crew members delicately moved people and cables out of the way. "Let's see what we can do here doorwise," said director Dick Gilling, closing the doors. O'Brien sat in a chair that put part of him in the camera's range and had to be relocated. "Oh," said a crew member to him, "your toe might be in — do you mind?"

Gilling reacquainted Galbraith with the cueing device mounted above the camera, with the script turned manually on rollers, and red marks between sentences to indicate where the star should turn or sit down.

"Don't worry, I have a certain recollection of the words anyway," said Galbraith.

"All right now, I'd like it very quiet please, now please just don't talk," said Gilling, and filming began, with Galbraith reading his words wryly — sort of like Harry Reasoner.

"Cut," said Gilling. "Hold it right there. I wouldn't mind trying it once more."

"What?" asked Galbraith. "You want more pizz izz?"

"No," said Gilling, "a little faster at the beginning please."

Galbraith remembered suddenly that he was still wearing his Federal Reserve visitor's badge and threw it to his wife, who was sitting in the corner. While the camera was being reloaded, Galbraith explained to the onlookers, "We do this several times. That enables the crew to get it better in mind. Then they can all pass their Cambridge economics exam."

Take two. Galbraith goofed during the reading, referring to the Federal Reserve as a "central blank" instead of "central bank."

Another take, and only a few little fluffs. Galbraith asked his wife how he was doing. She said fine but added, "You could smile a little bit."

"This is a serious subject," said Galbraith, smiling. "There's never been a funny banker. Evelyn Waugh wrote about a drunken banker, but nobody ever had a funny banker."

Nevertheless, the filming over, Galbraith autographed a copy of his new book, "Money — Whence It Came, Where It Went," for Federal Reserve chief Arthur Burns, and whatever he inscribed, it made Williams laugh when he showed it to her. Galbraith was laughing too as he left the rooms for Burn's office.

CHANNEL 10 WANTS YOU!

"What's My Angle?", a new show that appears on Cablevision's Channel 10 on Wednesday mornings at 10:30 is obviously a take-off on "What's My Line" . . . but this new angle is that it concentrates on acquainting Victoria viewers with the more than 100 volunteer agencies in the city.

If you want a chance to appear on the show—either in the capacity of a volunteer, or in that of a guest who can guess the agency that the volunteer represents in fewer than ten guesses based on clues given in response to your questions, — contact Sister Bede Sullivan, producer of the show, at the University of Victoria Education Department.

FILM JOINS FAMED PAIR

Dick Van Dyke, on 8 at 7. A variety special hosted by Dick Van Dyke, which may turn into a series for mid-season replacement. Tonight's show has Mary Tyler Moore, Carl Reiner and Ike and Tina Turner joining Dick for a program of songs, dancing and comedy sketches. Gabriel Kaplan (Welcome Back, Kotter) makes a cameo appearance. (60 mins.)

DICK VAN DYKE
. . . on 8 at 7 p.m.

Ascent on Man, on 9 at 7. The history of astronomy is traced in part 6 of this award-winning series, conceived and hosted by the late British scientist Dr. Jacob Bronowski. The program includes an examination of Galileo's early use of the telescope; his experiments to prove the Copernican theory that the planets revolve around the sun; and the historic 1633 trial in Rome where he was charged with heresy. (60 mins.)

Romantic Rebellion, on 9 at 8. Host Kenneth Clark examines the life and work of painter Jean-Auguste Dominique (1780-1867). (30 mins.)

Classic Theatre, on 9 at 9. A performance of Voltaire's 18th-century classic, Candide, especially staged for television and starring Frank Finlay as Voltaire and Ian Oglivy as Candide. This BBC production is highlighted by excellent special effects. (90 mins.)

Maclear, on 8 at 9:30. After the Parcel Exploded — a moving report on the after effects, both physical and emotional, on a young British army officer who was severely injured while serving in strife-torn Ulster in 1973. (30 mins.)

Some of My Best Friends Are Men, on 2 at 10:30. Segments on tonight's program include a report on battered wives; and a look at the possibility of legalizing prostitution. (30 mins.)

Interview Special, on 9 at 10.30. Physicist Jeffrey Kirsch, talks with biologist and author Paul Ehrlich (The Population Bomb; and The End of Affluence), who warns the earth can no longer affort the "American way of consumption." (30 mins.)

Movies

Ask Any Girl (xxx), on 8 at 12:45. A lightweight 1959 comedy about the adventures of a country girl in New York City, enhanced by the bright performances of Shirley MacLaine, David Niven and Gig Young.

Sunset Boulevard (xxxx), on 11 at 1. Billy Wilder directed Gloria Swanson, William Holden and Erich von Stroheim in this multi-Oscar winning 1950 study of Hollywood decadence, focusing on an ambitious screenwriter who uses an aging silent screen star to further his career—with tragic results.

The French Connection (xxxx), on 7 at 9. Five Oscars went to this exciting 1971 crime-drama based on a real-life narcotics investigation, and featuring Gene Hackman in his award-winning portrayal of Jimmy "Popeye" Doyle, a veteran New York City detective who becomes obsessed with the case of his career—a multi-million dollar shipment of heroin being smuggled into the city. (The film comes with a network warning that it may not be suitable for all members of the family.)

JAMES STEWART
. . . on 11 at 9 p.m.

LEE REMICK
. . . on 8 at midnight

The Rare Breed (xxx), on 11 at 9. An entertaining 1966 western about a pair of gentle British ladies who arrive in the Old West with their prize English bull, in the hope of starting a new and hardier breed of cattle. Excellent performances are turned in by Maureen O'Hara, Juliet Mills, James Stewart and Brian Keith.

The Anderson Tapes (xxx), on 12 at 9:30. Sean Connery, Dyan Cannon and Alan King star in this lively 1971 suspense-drama about a plot to rob a luxury apartment house.

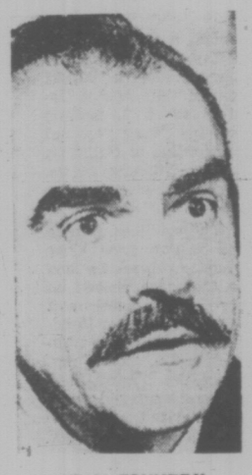
The Family (xxx), on 12 at 11:30. A violent 1970 Italian-made crime-drama starring Charles Bronson as a professional gangland killer seeking vengeance on those who betrayed him. Supporting cast includes Jill Ireland and Telly Savalas.

We're No Angels (xxx), on 2 at midnight. Humphrey Bogart, Peter Ustinov and Aldo Ray star in this 1955 comedy about a trio of Devil's Island escapees planning to rob a family, but becomes involved in its personal affairs instead.

100 Rifles (xx), on 6 at midnight. A 1969 "quickie" western, designed to cash-in on the box-office draw of Raquel Welch, Burt Reynolds and Jim Brown.

The Wheeler Dealers (xxx), on 8 at midnight. James Garner and Lee Remick star in this zany 1963 romantic comedy about an oil tycoon who comes to New York to raise money for drilling, and runs into a pretty stock analyst.

Castle Keep (xx), on 7 at 12:10 a.m. A 1969 Second World War drama about the occupation of a strategic Belgian castle by American soldiers, starring Burt Lancaster and Peter Falk.



SEAN CONNERY
. . . on 12 at 9:30 p.m.

River of Mystery (x), on 8 at 2:15 a.m. Predictable 1969 adventure set in the jungles of Brazil, about two soldiers of fortune risking their lives for hidden diamonds.

Women's Prison (xx), on 6 at 2:20. Ida Lupino and Howard Duff star in this unpleasant 1955 drama about inmates at a women's prison ruled by a cruel warden.

Maclear Profiles One Man's Courage

Newspaper headlines every day report accidents — people killed, people injured — and we become immune to them. But what of those persons whose lives are suddenly, drastically changed? Correspondent, Michael Maclear, investigates the events in the life of one such man in the months which follow a terrible injury, in the next episode of Maclear, entitled After the Parcel Exploded, telecasting Thursday, October 30, 9:30-10:00 p.m. on the CTV Television Network.

Raymond Hazan was a British soldier in Ulster when he picked up a parcel which exploded. Suddenly, while spared his life, he was blinded, his right hand was gone, and his hearing seriously impaired. Newly married and expecting his first child, he was faced with handicaps which could have destroyed him.

When Maclear meets with Hazan, instead of finding a broken man, a hopeless cripple, he encounters a person who accepted his fate and worked relentlessly to make a new life with the best of his abilities. Fourteen weeks after the explosion, Ray 'graduated' from 'a hospital for the blind and went back to the world to train for a new profession and prepare for the birth of his child. While accepting his blindness, he admits to Maclear that the hardest part was emotionally facing the fact that he would never see his offspring. Four months after the explosion, his wife, Janney, gave birth to a son.

Later, Hazan decided on a new career — as an interpreter — and he and his family moved to Belgium where he now studies at Mons University, one of many in that country which provides special places for handicapped people. Ray finds that he has the facility for interpreting, and Jenny expresses her relief and joy to Maclear. "The biggest moment that stands out in my mind is when he came through the door after he'd done his first real interpreting session . . . and he said 'it's alright, I can interpret,' and I hadn't really considered what we'd been able to do if he hadn't been able to."

An extraordinary man? Maclear notes that "he calls himself 'a very average person,' explaining that we all have the ability to cope.

HALLOWEEN PANIC—Paul Shenar recreates the hysteria set off by Orson Welles' famed 1938 radio broadcast of H. G. Welles War of the Worlds, when he stars as the young Welles in The Night That Panicked America, a Halloween drama special on Friday at 9 p.m. on 4. The terror that swept the U.S. that night, shook the broadcast industry to its roots.

GLORIA SWANSON portrays an aging silent screen star who traps an opportunistic young writer in her decadent world in the 1950 triple-Oscar winning film, Sunset Boulevard, to be shown on Thursday at 1 p.m. on Channel 11.

CBC Changes Focus Of Drama Series

During its second season CBC-TV's unique chapter-series House of Pride will narrow its geographical focus but broaden its dramatic perspective.

This year's series will concentrate on events in three cities, Halifax, Winnipeg and Toronto, although one of the Vancouver characters, Mary Kirby (Charmion King), will relocate in Toronto where her brothers Daniel and Ross Pride (Murray Westgate and Budd Knapp) reside. And the stories will be punchier and more topical, dealing dramatically with such subjects as politics, pollution, immigration and romance.

Another major change: in a vote of confidence for the series potential, it has been scheduled in prime time this season, Thursday nights at 9:30 p.m. on CBC-owned stations and some affiliates.

House of Pride is a CBC drama department production chronicling the life and times of several generations of the widely scattered Pride family. In addition to those mentioned previously there are Dan Pride (Colin Fox) and oceanographer in Halifax and his wife (Florence Paterson) and family; and the Boychuks (Steve Pernie and Julie Amato) and their family in Winnipeg. Another major character is Daniel's daughter Hester (angela Clare) who lives with him on the Pride homestead outside Toronto.

During introductory episodes last season mention was made of Andrew, a missing brother of Daniel, Ross and Mary. This Andrew turns up in person, a somewhat mysterious, likeable rogue played to the hilt by veteran character actor Cec Linder. Andrew's presence on the scene triggers interesting and disturbing consequences for other members of the clan and further complicates Daniel's refusal to move from the family farm which, by the terms of Old Dan's will, can be sold and the profits divided among various members of the family if Daniel does vacate.

This season most episodes can be enjoyed individually, although a main plotline may run through two or three programs; a new major storyline is introduced before the old one is completely resolved. There will be far less flitting back and forth between various geographical locations — the plots themselves will dictate what cities are seen in the individual episodes. As Halifax, Winnipeg and Toronto scenes all will be taped on location in the cities where was the case last year, the the events take place.

Smoother continuity, prime-time exposure, and gutsier issues — plus the appearance of the family blacksheep, Andrew — A new exciting season for fans of continuing drama on house of Pride, this fall, on CBC-TV.

CLASSIC THEATRE—Frank Finlay stars in a special television adaptation of 18th-century writer Voltaire's black comedy, Candide, to be telecast on PBS's Classic Theatre series on Thursday at 9 p.m. on Channel 9.
